GOVERNMENT IN CONTROL LATE TODAY

Bombings, Street Fights, and Railway Wreck Are Reported to Capital

WIRES TORN DOWN

Move to Effect General Revolution Believed to Be Halted by Authorities

(Copyright, 1933, by United Press)

MADRID, Dec. 9.—(UP)—(Via Telephone to Gibraltar) — A long planned anarchist revolution broke out in the northeastern provinces of Spain and after spreading rapidly to a dozen towns seemed to have passed its height today.

Authorities, though hopeful the revolt had failed, were watchful, fearing strikes that might become of revolutionary character.

Bombings, street fights and a railway wreck marked the outbreak, of which the country had been in fear for days. There was serious loss of life and no casualty lists had been tabulated, so fast did reports multiply. Ten were injured but none was killed, in the wreck.

Revolt Spreads

From Barcelona and Zaragoza, important industrial towns, the revolt spread to small ones around and later broke out in Cuenca, southeast of Madrid; Linares, down near the Mediterannean, and the Island of Minorca, according to reports.

Telephone and telegraph wires connecting Madrid with the northern and eastern districts were cut by revolutionists and for a time the capital was cut off from a large part of the country and from Northern Europe.

Communications were being restored rapidly this morning. At 9 o'clock the general situation seemed more quiet.

The anarchists sought to effect a general revolutionary strike at Barcelona, aimed at overthrowing the government in favor of a communistic regime.

Authorities all over the country had been warned for days that a revolution was planned. Civil guardsmen had been conducting raids of known subversive elements' headquarters.

Remain Inactive

Since their general strike in Barcelona in 1930, which some hold precipitated the fall of the monarchy, the anarchists and syndicalists had been inactive at least in the open.

A few hours after the first meeting of the Cortes, or parliament here yesterday the long awaited revolt was precipitated.

The first disorders occurred at Zaragoza where members of the civil guard came on a gang of 20 men flying a red flag. They were found to be guarding two sacks containing 30 bombs, a rifle and revolvers. The guardsmen were fired on. Two of the anarchists fell, one dead, the other wounded. Several were arrested as the gang fled.

The signal for the revolt there came just after midnight when a bomb was exploded in Virtud street, near a motor truck carrying storm police. Five persons were injured, two being policemen. Firing broke out between police and civilians, with unknown results.

$220,000,000 SUIT AGAINST MELLON LOSES

District of Columbia Jurist Dismisses Case as Being Unsupported

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Justice Proctor of District of Columbia supreme court today dismissd a $220,000,000 suit brought against Andrew Mellon, Ogden Mills and other former treasury officials by David A. Olson.

Olson, a one-time investigator for the senate stock market committee, charged that the former treasury heads had granted foreign steamship lines illegal tax refunds of $110,000,000.

Acting under an old statute, he filed suit for twice that sum in the name of the federal government.

Justice Proctor dismissed the suit with the brief declaration that it could not be supported at law. He ordered Olson to pay costs of the proceedings.

In addition to Mellon and Mills the suit was directed against Arthur Ballantine, former undersecretary of the treasury; David H. Blair, former commissioner of internal revenue; and Alexander Gregg, former general counsel for the bureau of internal revenue.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 9.—(UP)—California had 80,000 men and women at work under the federal civil works program today, according to a telegram sent to Washington authorities.

COMPLETES STUDY OF NEW OIL CODE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Secretary of Interior Ickes, administrator of the oil code, today was completing his study of a counter proposal to price fixing submitted by dominant oil concerns.

The proposal was in the form of agreements among 24 major first to stabilize prices by limiting production and fixing the margins of profit for refiners and handlers from the oil well to the consumer.

One of the agreements would create a national petroleum agency, a voluntary organization of the oil firms, to supervise the industry and discipline violators of its rules by cutting off deliveries.

SLAYER OF SON TO FACE MURDER COUNT

LITTLETON, Colo., Dec. 9. —(UP)—With the threat of mob violence expelled by removal of the accused man to the strong Denver county jail, authorities here prepared today to file murder charges against Donald K. Smith, confesed slayer of his three-year-old son.

The charges were being prepared by Deputy District Attorney A. T. Monson who was in possession of new allegations of Smith's cruelty to his family before he allegedly beat his son, Donald, to death.

Mrs. Mabel Smith, wife of the accused man, and mother of the dead child, told authorities of incidents of fiendish cruelty during her short married life.

Movie Stars Not Good Hitchhikers

Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable found this out when they wagered they could thumb a ride near their studio.

Standing on opposite corners, they began hailing passing motorists. Finally one stopped. It was a pretty girl and it was a ride for Gable.

Two miles down the road, he alighted. But there was no ride back. So he walked. Arriving at the starting corner, he found Miss Colbert, jerking a tired thumb toward passing traffic.

Plan 1200 Mile Flight to Port of Spain; Spend Night in Brazil

PARA, Brazil., Dec. 9.—(UP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh will leave for home tomorrow, Lindbergh told the United Press today.

At first Lindbergh intended to leave today, but he decided when he rose to spend the day looking over his seaplane, which has had hard usage. The Lindberghs left New York five months ago today.

Lindbergh told the United Press he would take the Antilles route up the coast to Port au Spain, Trinidad, just off Venezuela, and thence via the windward and leeward islands, Puerto Rico, Haiti and Cuba to Florida.

The Lindberghs know the route well.

It was indicated that the Lindberghs might make directly for Port au Spain, a flight of 1250 miles. His last two hops have been 1870 and 1000 miles.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh spent the night as the guests of George H. Pickerell, former American consul, after their arrival from Natal.

BUDGET INCREASES COME BEFORE COURT

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Further test of the 5 per cent limitation placed on budget increases for counties under the Riley-Stewart tax plan will be had before the state supreme court, Controller Ray L. Riley announced today.

The third district appellate court ruled that counties were entitled to include 1932-33 school expenditures in the base for computing the permissive 5 per cent increase. The board of equalization, which administers the act, contended that school funds should be excluded because they were now provided by the state.

Twenty of the 58 counties in the state submitted budgets exceeding the five per cent limit, the board of equalization reported.

MAKES APPEAL TO PUBLIC TO SUPPORT PARK

Committee Chairman Smart Asks Citizens to Cooperate in Move

EMPHATICALLY stressing the need for immediate action and making a direct appeal for public support of the plan launched to obtain a 20-acre city park for Santa Ana, J. S. Smart, chairman of a special committee appointed to handle the work, today urged that residents of the city co-operate in securing the new park.

The announcement and appeal today followed a meeting late yesterday afternoon in the chamber of commerce office when representatives of various civic organizations in the city unanimously approved the plans.

The matter of acquisition of land for park purposes was approved by the board of directors of the chamber of commerce yesterday, when the chamber voted to sponsor the movement to secure a 20-acre park for public purposes.

Immediate action is necessary, as the project must be completed and approved under the Civil Work administration program by December 15.

Plan Outlined

The plan is to purchase about 20 acres of land which would be developed into a park, using material and men furnished by the government. It is necessary that 100 or more men in the city underwrite the purchase of the land, it was pointed out, inasmuch as the city has no funds for purchase of land for park purposes at the present time.

Elsewhere in The Register today is a pledge blank, which J. S. Smart, general chairman of the committee working to promote the park, asks be signed by those who desire to cooperate in getting the park movement started. It provides an easy plan for financing the project, which is to be repaid in the future by the city.

MEXICAN DIVORCE LAW INTERPRETED

NEW YORK, Dec. 9—(UP)—The recent decision of the supreme court of Mexico interpreted as invalidating many divorces obtained in several states there, did not apply to the state of Chihuahua as originally reported, the United Press was informed today in a communication from Pascual Garcia, attorney general of the state.

The "erroneous construction" of the decision "does a great injustice to the state of Chihuahua and in particular to those who have heretofore procured divorces in compliance with the laws of that state," Garcia said, pointing out that the original report said the ruling nullified decrees issued by the courts of his state.

GIVEN CONFIDENCE VOTE

PARIS, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Premier Camille Chautemps won a vote of confidence by 493 to 63 today on the budget article providing pay cuts for civil servants. Two previous governments were overthrown on the issue.

Socialists abstained from the vote as a gesture of protest.

House Party Results In Two Deaths

Palatial Home of Chicago Man Near London Completely Destroyed

WHITECHURCH, England., Dec. 9.—(UP)—A house party made up of British, French and American notables came to a tragic end today when fire swept through the mansion of Leander J. McCormick of Chicago.

The Duc le la Tremoille of France, burned to death.

The Honorable James H. R. Rodney, borther of the eighth Baron Rodney, died of injuries received when he jumped 20 feet from a window to escape the roaring flames.

Rodney's wife, the former Frances Strickland Oldham Lovell, of Seattle, was injured critically when she jumped with him. She suffered grave injuries to her back, X-ray examination showed.

McCormicks Escape

McCormick and his wife, who was the French Countess de Fleurieu, escaped in night dress.

The Rodneys and the Duc de Tremoille were week-end guests of the McCormicks. Fire broke out in a top floor bedroom. Spreading quickly through the old house, flames cut off the escape of the Duke and the Rodneys.

Fire brigades from near-by towns fought vainly to save many valuable paintings and other art objects.

Rodney died at the Royal Hants hospital at Winchester, to which Mrs. Rodney also was taken.

Masters and servants in the great house, "Herony," surrounded by extensive grounds, were sleeping. It was 2 a. m. Mrs. McCormick was awakened by the smell of smoke and the crackling of flames.

Spine Fractured

Hospital officials at Winchester said that Mrs. Rodney suffered a fractured spine.

HUMBLE OIL CO. TO SPLIT ITS STOCK

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 9—(UP)—Directors of Humble Oil and Refining company have called a stockholders meeting for December 19 to vote on a 3 for 1 split up in the common stock.

The stock, under the plans, would be changed from $25 par value to no par value.

Under the provisions the number of shares would be increased from 3,000,000 to 9,000,000. Three shares of no par value wil be given for each share of $25 par value.

Executive Vice-President H. C. Weiss said directors had "made no recommendations regarding increase of capital."

GEORGE PEEK WILL GET FEDERAL POST

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Administration chieftains today canvassed the possibilities of placing George N. Peek, agricultural adjustment administrator, in a post of his liking in the state department where he could promote foreign trade.

It was widely believed he would be replaced in his present post by Chester Davis, former Montana agricultural commissioner, who has directed the AAA crop reduction program, with which Peek was not in sympathy.

His transfer to a foreign trade post would end a row in the AAA where he has clashed with Secretary Wallace and Assistant Secretary Tugwell over methods of achieving agricultural recovery.

MARY PICKFORD ASKS DIVORCE FROM DOUGLAS

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—(UP)—The most publicized romance of modern time—a love that for more than a decade held Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks up to the world as "the perfect mates"—was at a definite end today.

It concluded with the cold, colorless legal terminology of a complaint in which Miss Pickford, known for years as America's sweetheart, asked for a divorce from her famed, acrobatic husband.

Fairbanks showed a "lack of consideration of Miss Pickford's feelings and sensibilities and has consistently carried on a course of conduct which has caused Miss Pickford mental anguish and grievous mental suffering," the action claimed.

The actor since June, 1930, and against the wishes of Miss Pickford, "continuously absented himself from the home of the parties hereto for months at a time," Miss Pickford complained.

She alleged that his action, because of her position as an actress, "caused much unfavorable comment in newspapers, magazines and periodicals throughout the world."

There were other paragraphs in the complaint, but they added nothing to those outlined above.

Brief Statement

Miss Pickford followed the complaint with a brief formal statement that read:

"For the past several years my married life has become increasingly unhappy. Being convinced that under the existing circumstances the future offers no solution, it is with the deepest regret that I am filing suit for divorce."

Having made this non-committal statement, the slight, blonde actress boarded a train for New York, where she intends to study plays preparatory to a possible Broadway appearance.

The divorce action said Miss Pickford and Fairbanks had agreed on a property settlement, and this was immediately evident when a deed, transferring to Miss Pickford their $500,000 mansion, Pickfair, was filed with the county recorder. The consideration for the transfer was placed at $100.

Thus, with Fairbanks still in Europe, where he has been for the past six months, came the end of the marriage that cinema fans the world over had been led for years to believe was ideal.

War Days' Romance

The Fairbanks-Pickford romance started during the World war days when Liberty Loan officials had called Fairbanks, Miss Pickford and Charlie Chaplin—then the three top ranking stars of films—to aid in the drive for funds.

Next to Chaplin, Fairbanks then was possibly the most popular of male stars, "America's sweetheart" at that time was drawing $10,000 a week.

In 1928 Fairbanks was divorced by his first wife, Ann Beth Sully, now Mrs. Jack Whiting, of New York, the mother of his only son, Douglas Fairbanks jr.

Miss Pickford was married to Owen Moore, screen player, but she divorced him in Nevada early in 1920. On March 28, 1920, Miss Pickford and Fairbanks were wed secretly here.

ASK CATHOLICS TO JOIN BIG CRUSADE

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—All Catholic women have been asked by William Cardinal O'Connell to join in a crusade against indecent plays, motion pictures and books.

"The forces of evil, although a minority, are able to triumph because of the inactivity of the forces for good," the cardinal said. "It is precisely to arouse these forces for good and for the general welfare into concerted effort for social betterment and common decency that I appeal to all our Catholic women's organizations to take this matter in hand and demand that the stage, the films and the bookstands be cleansed of the filth that is being presented so brazenly."

LEAKS IN GOLD PRICES TO BE PROBE SUBJECT

(Copyright, 1933, by United Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Treasury officials have started an investigation, it was learned today, into alleged "leaks" of the government's daily domestic gold price which have given foreign exchange traders and speculators opportunity to gather large profits.

Although the treasury announces its domestic gold buying price at 9:45 a. m. daily to the press, complaints have been received by treasury officials that the price is available in London several minutes before its release to the press in Washington.

Prices Cabled

Last week, one news service reported the gold price was cabled back to New York from London eight minutes before its release in Washington.

Another service reported the price was available in London four minutes before it was received by cable from Washington, although the cable transmission took less than one minute.

Treasury officials in continuing their investigation into the source of the alleged "leaks" said today that Washington is the only place at which the price is announced. Simultaneously with its release to the press at the treasury, the price is wired to the federal reserve bank of New York on the treasury communication wires.

Tests Are Made

Several tests are known to have been made by treasury officials in an effort to discover the source of the alleged leak but so far no evidence has been uncovered.

The daily gold price is fixed every morning by Acting Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau; Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Earle Baillie, assistant to Morgenthau.

Treasury officials refused to reveal how many persons have knowledge of the price before it is released.

The gold buying program of the government for which the domestic price is fixed was inaugurated nearly two months ago carrying out the administration's dollar depreciation program. It was hoped that the depreciation of the dollar would touch off inflationary buying of commodities and in turn force a rise in prices.

Because of the importance of the gold buying price on foreign exchange currency fluctuations of all countries, foreign exchange speculators and traders would have an important opportunity to garner large profits if they had advance information as to the daily price.

FEDERAL PRICE OF GOLD IS UNCHANGED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—The government today set its price on newly mined American gold at $34.01 an ounce, unchanged since last week.

The London price today was 126 shillings 6 pence, down 3 pence from yesterday. On the basis of the opening exchange rate for the pound sterling ($5.15½) this was equivalent to $32.61 an ounce.

MEXICAN DIVORCE LAW INTERPRETED

NEW YORK, Dec. 9—(UP)—The recent decision of the supreme court of Mexico interpreted as invalidating many divorces obtained in several states there, did not apply to the state of Chihuahua as originally reported, the United Press was informed today in a communication from Pascual Garcia, attorney general of the state.

The "erroneous construction" of the decision "does a great injustice to the state of Chihuahua and in particular to those who have heretofore procured divorces in compliance with the laws of that state," Garcia said, pointing out that the original report said the ruling nullified decrees issued by the courts of his state.

GIVEN CONFIDENCE VOTE

PARIS, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Premier Camille Chautemps won a vote of confidence by 403 to 63 today on the budget article providing pay cuts for civil servants. Two previous governments were overthrown on the issue.

House Party Results In Two Deaths

WHITECHURCH, England., Dec. 9.—(UP)—A house party made up of British, French and American notables came to a tragic end today when fire swept through the mansion of Leander J. McCormick of Chicago.

The Duc le la Tremoille of France, burned to death.

The Honorable James H. R. Rodney, borther of the eighth Baron Rodney, died of injuries received when he jumped 20 feet from a window to escape the roaring flames.

Rodney's wife, the former Frances Strickland Oldham Lovell, of Seattle, was injured critically when she jumped with him. She suffered grave injuries to her back, X-ray examination showed.

McCormicks Escape

McCormick and his wife, who was the French Countess de Fleurieu, escaped in night dress.

The Rodneys and the Duc de Tremoille were week-end guests of the McCormicks. Fire broke out in a top floor bedroom. Spreading quickly through the old house, flames cut off the escape of the Duke and the Rodneys.

Fire brigades from near-by towns fought vainly to save many valuable paintings and other art objects.

Rodney died at the Royal Hants hospital at Winchester, to which Mrs. Rodney also was taken.

Masters and servants in the great house, "Herony," surrounded by extensive grounds, were sleeping. It was 2 a. m. Mrs. McCormick was awakened by the smell of smoke and the crackling of flames.

Spine Fractured

Hospital officials at Winchester said that Mrs. Rodney suffered a fractured spine.

HUMBLE OIL CO. TO SPLIT ITS STOCK

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 9—(UP)—Directors of Humble Oil and Refining company have called a stockholders meeting for December 19 to vote on a 3 for 1 split up in the common stock.

The stock, under the plans, would be changed from $25 par value to no par value.

Under the provisions the number of shares would be increased from 3,000,000 to 9,000,000. Three shares of no par value will be given for each share of $25 par value.

Executive Vice-President H. C. Weiss said directors had "made no recommendations regarding increase of capital."

GEORGE PEEK WILL GET FEDERAL POST

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Administration chieftains today canvassed the possibilities of placing George N. Peek, agricultural adjustment administrator, in a post of his liking in the state department where he could promote foreign trade.

It was widely believed he would be replaced in his present post by Chester Davis, former Montana agricultural commissioner, who has directed the AAA crop reduction program, with which Peek was not in sympathy.

His transfer to a foreign trade post would end a row in the AAA where he has clashed with Secretary Wallace and Assistant Secretary Tugwell over methods of achieving agricultural recovery.

MARY PICKFORD ASKS DIVORCE FROM DOUGLAS

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—(UP)—The most publicized romance of modern time—a love that for more than a decade held Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks up to the world as "the perfect mates"—was at a definite end today.

It concluded with the cold, colorless legal terminology of a complaint in which Miss Pickford, known for years as America's sweetheart, asked for a divorce from her famed, acrobatic husband.

Fairbanks showed a "lack of consideration of Miss Pickford's feelings and sensibilities and has consistently carried on a course of conduct which has caused Miss Pickford mental anguish and grievous mental suffering," the action claimed.

The actor since June, 1930, and against the wishes of Miss Pickford, "continuously absented himself from the home of the parties hereto for months at a time," Miss Pickford complained.

She alleged that his action, because of her position as an actress, "caused much unfavorable comment in newspapers, magazines and periodicals throughout the world."

There were other paragraphs in the complaint, but they added nothing to those outlined above.

Brief Statement

Miss Pickford followed the complaint with a brief formal statement that read:

"For the past several years my married life has become increasingly unhappy. Being convinced that under the existing circumstances the future offers no solution, it is with the deepest regret that I am filing suit for divorce."

Having made this non-committal statement, the slight, blonde actress boarded a train for New York, where she intends to study plays preparatory to a possible Broadway appearance.

The divorce action said Miss Pickford and Fairbanks had agreed on a property settlement, and this was immediately evident when a deed, transferring to Miss Pickford their $500,000 mansion, Pickfair, was filed with the county recorder. The consideration for the transfer was placed at $100.

Thus, with Fairbanks still in Europe, where he has been for the past six months, came the end of the marriage that cinema fans the world over had been led for years to believe was ideal.

War Days' Romance

The Fairbanks-Pickford romance started during the World war days when Liberty Loan officials had called Fairbanks, Miss Pickford and Charlie Chaplin—then the three top ranking stars of films—to aid in the drive for funds.

Next to Chaplin, Fairbanks then was possibly the most popular of male stars, "America's sweetheart" at that time was drawing $10,000 a week.

In 1928 Fairbanks was divorced by his first wife, Ann Beth Sully, now Mrs. Jack Whiting, of New York, the mother of his only son, Douglas Fairbanks jr.

Miss Pickford was married to Owen Moore, screen player, but she divorced him in Nevada early in 1920. On March 28, 1920, Miss Pickford and Fairbanks were wed secretly here.

ASK CATHOLICS TO JOIN BIG CRUSADE

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—All Catholic women have been asked by William Cardinal O'Connell to join in a crusade against indecent plays, motion pictures and books.

"The forces of evil, although a minority, are able to triumph because of the inactivity of the forces for good," the cardinal said. "It is precisely to arouse these forces for good and for the general welfare into concerted effort for social betterment and common decency that I appeal to all our Catholic women's organizations to take this matter in hand and demand that the stage, the films and the bookstands be cleansed of the filth that is being presented so brazenly."

LEAKS IN GOLD PRICES TO BE PROBE SUBJECT

(Copyright, 1933, by United Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Treasury officials have started an investigation, it was learned today, into alleged "leaks" of the government's daily domestic gold price which have given foreign exchange traders and speculators opportunity to gather large profits.

Although the treasury announces its domestic gold buying price at 9:45 a. m. daily to the press, complaints have been received by treasury officials that the price is available in London several minutes before its release to the press in Washington.

Prices Cabled

Last week, one news service reported the gold price was cabled back to New York from London eight minutes before its release in Washington.

Another service reported the price was available in London four minutes before it was received by cable from Washington, although the cable transmission took less than one minute.

Treasury officials in continuing their investigation into the source of the alleged "leaks" said today that Washington is the only place at which the price is announced. Simultaneously with its release to the press at the treasury, the price is wired to the federal reserve bank of New York on the treasury communication wires.

Tests Are Made

Several tests are known to have been made by treasury officials in an effort to discover the source of the alleged leak but so far no evidence has been uncovered.

The daily gold price is fixed every morning by Acting Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau; Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Earle Bailie, assistant to Morgenthau.

Treasury officials refused to reveal how many persons have knowledge of the price before it is released.

The gold buying program of the government for which the domestic price is fixed was inaugurated nearly two months ago carrying out the administration's dollar depreciation program. It was hoped that the depreciation of the dollar would touch off inflationary buying of commodities and in turn force a rise in prices.

Because of the importance of the gold buying price on foreign exchange currency fluctuations of all countries, foreign exchange speculators and traders would have an important opportunity to garner large profits if they had advance information as to the daily price.

FEDERAL PRICE OF GOLD IS UNCHANGED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—The government today set its price on newly mined American gold at $34.01 an ounce, unchanged since last week.

The London price today was 126 shillings 6 pence, down 3 pence from yesterday. On the basis of the opening exchange rate for the pound sterling ($5.13½) this was equivalent to $32.61 an ounce.

CLEVER COMEDY WINS APPLAUSE FOR PLAYERS

BY ELEANOR ELLIOTT

"Let Us Be Gay," directed by Gladys Simpson Shafer; staged by Eleanor Harnois and a capable scenery committee, and played by a well balanced cast, which opened last night and closes tonight at the Ebell auditorium, bids fair to take its place among the finest and most popular plays yet produced by the local association.

It was a warmly appreciative audience that assembled last night for the opening of this clever comedy of present day life from the pen of Rachel Crothers. And one of the mildest bits of praise that might be accorded the evening is to say that there was not one dull moment from the rise of the curtain on the prologue to its descent on a well sustained "happy ending."

The play is one of clever lines rather than action and as such demanded intelligent work on the part of the cast as well as the director. The Players were fortunate in having Mrs. Shafer's direction. But Mrs. Shafer likewise was fortunate in having such a cast at her command.

Local playgoers have learned to expect outstanding work from Mona Summers Smith and from Julia Ann Hyde. Last night's audience learned that correspondingly fine work may be expected in the future from a whole group of new Players brought into prominence by this first play of the season.

Favorites Please

Mrs. Smith in the feminine lead of "Kitty Brown," and Mrs. Hyde in the character role of the autocratic "Mrs. Boucicault," had numerous scenes together, complementing each other admirably in the quality of their work, their perfect timing, and their skill at characterization. Mrs. Smith's "Kitty" had an airy grace, a daring and a nonchalance that placed it as perhaps equalling her work in "The Last Mrs. Cheyney." Mrs. Hyde's character work was undoubtedly the cleverest she has ever done.

And what an array of new talent! John Colwell in the masculine lead of "Bob Brown" showed a poise and a finesse that proved surprising even to those who have seen his work in a few minor roles. His voice was especially fine, its intonations and inflections making it one of the most pleasing among men Players yet developed by the association.

The ingenue role of "Dierdre Lessing" introduced a wholly new Player, Katherine McDaniel, and those in last night's audience maintain that it was a wonderful introduction. Her work in the second act was especially fine as the scene might so easily have been over emphasized.

While the part of "Madge Livingston" was secondary to that of "Dierdre," the manner in which it was interpreted by Katherine Barr gave it an equal value. Her work was smoothly professional, and these two young women offer rare promise of material for future leading roles.

Men Predominate

Men predominated in the cast and with the exception of Wylie Carlyle and Robert Horn, all were new to Players' productions. Carlyle's previous work has been principally in character roles. In "Let Us Be Gay" he demonstrated an equal facility in playing straight parts, and his "Bruce Keen" was thoroughly convincing. Robert Horn did a nice bit of character work as "Whitman" the butler, always patient under Mrs. Boucicault's gibes.

Strictly new were John N. Miller as "Townley Town," and J. Leslie Steffenson as "Wallace Grainger." But they will not remain strangers, for undoubtedly bigger roles await them in future Community Plays. For even in a cast of such uniformly high quality their work was outstanding.

While the minor roles of doorman, chauffeur and maid offered smaller opportunity to John Hoy, John Knox and Kristine Nielsen, the quality of their work was in accord with that offered by the principals and each contributed a definite part to the smoothness of the play as a whole.

Incidentally "Let Us Be Gay" is a regular fashion revue, and some of the loveliest gowns imaginable delight the eye. Scenery and stage settings are striking, and for additional pleasure of last night's audience were those two delightful youngsters, Johnnie Stout, violinist, and Olive Schweitzer, pianist. Kreisler and Cadman compositions were played, and several encore numbers were demanded by an appreciative audience.

Tonight's musical program will be by Georgia Belle Walton, violinist, and Russell Rowland, pianist. The play will begin promptly at 8:15 o'clock, and indications from ticket sales, point to a capacity house at Ebell auditorium.

THOUSANDS THRONG LIGHTED STREETS AS HOLIDAY EVENT LAUNCHED IN S. A. LAST NIGHT

Sparkling with clusters of multi-colored lights and redolent with decorative touches of pine and fir, Santa Ana downtown streets last night were transformed into fairyland as thousands of residents and visitors from neighboring communities and farming sections trooped the sidewalks, thrilled with the dazzling sight and fired with the eager zest of holiday shopping.

Fourth street as well as Main street, principal thoroughfares of the business section, were lanes of dazzling lights and Christmas trees, through which the smiling, happy throng wandered up and down, pausing every few steps to view the attractive displays in the blazing shop windows along the streets.

Contributing to the festive spirit of the occasion, marking the formal opening of the local Christmas season, was the splendid musical program broadcast from the roof of the First National bank building under auspices of the Santa Ana Merchants association. The program in charge of Jerry Hall, master of ceremonies, who sang several numbers, included selections by the Elks double quartet and the Musical Arts Octette, whose offerings were well received by the milling crowds on the streets. Members of the Elk singing group included W. H. Galliene, W. C. Vieria, Dr. K. H. Sutherland, J. A. Miller, A. J. Garroway, F. L. Gibbs, Frank C. Pierce and H. P. Filer. Miss Ruth Armstrong, well known local pianist, acted as accompanist.

Those singing with the Musical Arts Octette were Sally Lee Scales, Holly Lash Visel, Irma Huffman May, Marie Bishop, Edith Cornell, Cecile Fross Willits, June Burns and Bess Neale, which group also was accompanied by Miss Armstrong.

Walter Swanberger, president of the Santa Ana Merchants association, made a brief address, welcoming the shoppers to the city. Through the use of amplifiers, the program was heard throughout the entire business section. The broadcast was made possible through the courtesy of Foster-Barker Music company, and the entertainment was arranged by Jerry Hall, Milton Foster and Gene Kahen.

Stores in the downtown district yesterday experienced the first heavy onslaught of holiday buying, and right up to the closing hour floors, aisles and stairways were crowded with gift seekers.

Beginning December 18 all stores will remain open during evenings until 9 p. m., it was announced. The best dressed show window will be judged within two weeks, it was added. Merchants from Pomona, Glendale, Anaheim, Fullerton and Orange have been invited by President Swanberger of the Merchants association to act as judges.

of the blaze. He revealed that Rodney, his only thought for his wife, stood beside her despite his mortal injuries as she lay on the ground outside the house.

"My wife and I, after she awakened me, ran along in blinding smoke through the halls, calling out to the others.

"My wife called to the duke, who replied. We groped a way to his room and heard the reassuring shout:

"'I am coming out.'

"'Make for the stairs,' shouted my wife.

"'I'll do that,' said the duke.

"That was the last we heard of him. We came out thinking that he was safe. We were horrified when we found he was not outside but we thought he might have wandered in the grounds.

MEETING CALLED TO LAUNCH SCOUT DRIVE

Launching the intensive effort in the "Crusade for Understanding," 50 men, interested in the Boy Scouts of America, will assemble at Scout headquarters, 715 North Sycamore street, Monday afternoon, for final instructions in carrying on the work for the coming week, it was announced today by C. L. Pritchard, who is chairman of the business division.

"Our purpose," Pritchard stated, "is to call upon every firm and individual in the business section of the city to acquaint them with the needs of character building activities for our boys and the methods which Scouting is using in providing them.

"We now have," he emphasized, "more than 500 active boys in Scouting in the Santa Ana district, and it is necessary that we not only provide the minimum of service to the scoutmasters who serve them, but that we may provide for the expansion of the movement to take care of the demands being made upon us by parents and institutions for additional organization."

Other leaders who will have charge of battalions include Majors Homer C. Chance, Fred Rowland, Alvin F. Nowotny and Harold Brown.

WILL ROGERS says:

BEVERLY HILLS, Dec. 9. (To the Editor of The Register:) U. S. Cabinet members can change, but when Notre Dame changes coaches you are getting into real news. Anderson just ran into bad breaks. I bet he will go somewhere else and turn out a great team, and Elmer Layden will come there and do great, for he won't be following Rockne. There just didn't happen to be anybody living that could follow Rockne. And while we are on football and off the gold, this Columbia College that's coming here New Year's, being New Yorkers they never was away from home so naturally they are not known out here. But we have heard of Nicholas Murray Butler, so we want 'em to bring "Nicholas" with 'em. We will hear a good speech even if the game is bad.

4 MARRIAGES DISSOLVED BY COURT ACTION

Three interlocutory decrees of divorce were granted yesterday in superior court and one marriage annulled. The annulment and two of the interlocutory decrees were handed down by Superior Judge James L. Allen and the other decree was granted by Presiding Judge G. K. Scovel.

In Judge Scovel's court Harold Kenny was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce from Mrs. Edith Kennedy on the grounds of desertion. The Kennys were married December 24, 1929, and separated June 8, 1930, when Kenny was transferred from Norfolk, Va., to San Pedro. According to his testimony, when he was transferred he came to California and as soon as he was located sent money to his wife for the trip to California but she refused to join him.

Mrs. Helen McClain had her marriage to Manford McClain annulled when she told Judge Allen that she and McClain lived together for more than seven years before she discovered that he had a wife living from whom he had not secured a divorce. The McClains were married October 16, 1926, and separated November 26, last.

Mrs. Alice Van Keirsbulck received a divorce decree from Adiel Van Keirsbulck who, at present is serving a sentence in the county jail for disturbing the peace. She also was given custody of the two children of the couple. She told the court that her husband had abused her and the children on many occasions and at one time had threatened to slay her with a hatchet. She was forced to call deputy sheriffs to protect her. They were maried September 11, 1917, in Belgium and separated November 7, last.

Mrs. Elma Quinn was given a decree from Glenn Quinn, custody of the couple's two children and $10 monthly for their support.

She told the court that Quinn habitually stayed out until a late hour at night and refused to tell her where he had been. She alleges that because she was afraid to stay at their home alone with the children her husband would take her to her mother's where she was forced to remain until past midnight. She also accused Quinn of abusing and striking her and spending his income for expensive cars instead of necessities for his family.

REVOLT IN SPAIN BREAKS AT DAWN

Barcelona, on the east coast, were warned of the anarchists' plans. All available police and civil guardsmen were mobilized.

Early this morning the revolt was proclaimed with bombs. Five were exploded, two in the San Francisco church.

Their marriage became public a week later, and from the first it was popular with their millions of film fans.

For the first six years of their wedded life they both boasted that they dined together every night. They never were separated overnight for ten years, they said with pride.

Rumors Spread

Meantime, the motion picture colony in general began to point to Miss Pickford and Fairbanks as the answer to all charges that husbands and wives were taken easily and cast aside as easily in Hollywood.

Any time there came a hint of scandal among lesser film people, Fairbanks and Miss Pickford immediately were mentioned by those anxious to claim the screen colony no worse than any other place.

In this manner they became known as "the ideal mates," and their marriage became "the perfect romance."

Fairbanks had been in England some time when Miss Pickford suddenly announced a definite separation.

It was said at the time her action followed a message from Fairbanks in which he notified her he no longer wished to assume any of the expenditures in connection with the upkeep of Pickfair.

By a coincidence, Douglas Fairbanks jr., who has been living in Europe with his father, returned to Hollywood within an hour of the time Miss Pickford filed suit against his father.

Young Fairbanks, recently divorced by Joan Crawford, screen star, said he had no previous knowledge of Miss Pickford's suit against his father.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS MAINTAINS SILENCE

LONDON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Douglas Fairbanks will maintain "dignified silence" regarding Mary Pickford's divorce action against him, and will build himself a bigger and better home to take the place of the Pickford-Fairbanks mansion, Pickfair, his press representative said today.

"Mr. Fairbanks will continue his dignified silence regarding personal matters. He will return to California after making a picture in Spain and one in England.

"Since he has deeded Pickfair to Miss Pickford, Mr. Fairbanks will build another home on his 2000-acre citrus ranch in Southern California, one of the finest true Spanish type. Architects working on the Spanish picture will gather data for plans in Andalusia."

MAKES APPEAL TO PUBLIC TO SUPPORT PARK

public meeting will be held in the board of supervisor's room in the courthouse to which all who are interested were invited to attend, Smart announced.

Immediate Action

In a statement made today, Chairman Smart declared that Santa Ana can have a 20-acre park right away if the work is done fast enough.

"We can have the park improved with a swimming pool, pleasure devices, tables, etc., if we can work fast enough," he declared. "The improvements can be provided without direct investment on the part of the city, if we can be speedy.

"The federal government will provide the labor and materials under the C. W. A. All that is required is that we furnish the land, and we have a plan to do this. What is required is that at least 100 citizens shall agree to pay, if called upon to do so, not to exceed $25 per year for 10 years to finance the purchase of land.

"There is a good prospect that all the money paid in, as provided, will be returned to subscribers, but we cannot explain the plan here. We will need to get at least 100 subscribers to this project by Tuesday night, December 12, or this opportunity will pass. We ask you to be one of these subscribers, and to act quickly.

Aske Support

"Obviously, there is not time for members of the committee to call upon everybody in so short a time Will you do your part by filling out the subscription blank in The Register today and mailing it to me or to the chamber of commerce? There will be no obligation incurred, unless 100 or more sign, and the park is acquired and improved."

Smart said that there is little doubt but what more than a sufficient number of men will be secured to finance the park. Among prominent citizens who have signed subscriptions already are J. P. Baumgartner, Mayor Paul Witmer, C. E. Walker, R. Carson Smith, John Knox, Harry L. Hanson, J. S. Smart, W. D. Ranney, Hugh J. Lowe, J. W. Estes, Ray Adkinson and Fred Newcomb.

Gruwell was arrested yesterday afternoon and was released after posting $2500 bail. Shafer was released yesterday on his own recognizance. Both men were in the local court in February, 1931, on charges of violating the corporate securities act after a complaint had been sworn by John Phillips, 920 North Olive street, charging that he was induced to buy $900 of alleged worthless stock in the Copper Conda Mines. Both Shafer and Gruwell were released at that time.

Under the new complaint filed by Phillips, the defendants are charged with grand theft of $900 for the stock and failing to secure a permit from the state corporation commission before selling stock

REVOKE PERMIT OF MOTORIST FOR FIVE YEARS

Frederick Handy, who pleaded guilty to an accusation of failing to stop and render aid after an automobile accident, was granted probation for five years yesterday by Superior Judge James L. Allen. As a part of the terms of his probation Handy paid a fine of $400 and had his operator's license revoked for five years. The fine was paid yesterday afternoon.

Handy's arrest followed an automobile crash several weeks ago near the Eddie Martin Airport. Three persons were injured in the accident, and Handy was alleged to have stopped his automobile, started to return to the scene of the crash, then fled when he ascertained that passengers in the other car were injured.

At his probation hearing yesterday Handy told the court that he returned to the scene of the accident as soon afer the crash as he could stop his automobile. He lost his head and fled, he said, when he heard someone in the crowd that had gathered say, "Let's get the driver of the other car." Handy also told the court that he had consumed three glasses of beer a short time prior to the crash. Dr. Milo K. Tedstrom, Handy's physician, who examined him at the jail shortly after his arrest, declared that the youth was not intoxicated. Dr. Tedstrom testified that Handy is being treated for an illness that creates symptoms similar to those of intoxication.

MOTHER HELD ON CHARGE OF KILLING BABE

Arrested after officers were told she had killed her newborn child, Mrs. Rosa Ruiz, 26-year-old Indian woman of Garden Grove, is being held in the county jail on a charge of investigation of murder.

Deputy sheriffs went to her home yesterday to question her and were surprised when she led them to the body of the child, wrapped in black silk in a trunk. She said the child died soon after its birth on Thanksgiving night and that the father lived near Atwood. She has been separated from her husband four years.

Coroner Earl Abbey ordered an autopsy yesterday and it was found that the child, a girl, had lived but a brief time and came to its death from asphyxiation. An inquest will be held later. No charges had been filed by the district attorney at noon today.

Prices Raised On Third Grade Gas

Followng the recent change made by major oil companies, many independent dealers in Santa Ana and Southern California raised the price of third grade gasoline to 14½ cents today, still one-half cent lower than the majors.

The independent lines have been selling at 12½, 13 and 13½ cents, but most of them are believed to be using the new 14½ cent level. The price boost at Thanksgiving made by the majors raised the third grade fuel prices to 15 cents, with first grade at 17½ and ethyl at 19½.

CLEVER COMEDY WINS APPLAUSE FOR PLAYERS

BY ELEANOR ELLIOTT

"Let Us Be Gay," directed by Gladys Simpson Shafer; staged by Eleanor Harnois and a capable scenery committee, and played by a well balanced cast, which opened last night and closes tonight at the Ebell auditorium, bids fair to take its place among the finest and most popular plays yet produced by the local association.

It was a warmly appreciative audience that assembled last night for the opening of this clever comedy of present day life from the pen of Rachel Crothers. And one of the mildest bits of praise that might be accorded the evening is to say that there was not one dull moment from the rise of the curtain on the prologue to its descent on a well sustained "happy ending."

The play is one of clever lines rather than action and as such demanded intelligent work on the part of the cast as well as the director. The Players were fortunate in having Mrs. Shafer's direction. But Mrs. Shafer likewise was fortunate in having such a cast at her command.

Local playgoers have learned to expect outstanding work from Mona Summers Smith and from Julia Ann Hyde. Last night's audience learned that correspondingly fine work may be expected in the future from a whole group of new Players brought into prominence by this first play of the season.

Favorites Please

Mrs. Smith in the feminine lead of "Kitty Brown," and Mrs. Hyde in the character role of the autocratic "Mrs. Boucicault," had numerous scenes together, complementing each other admirably in the quality of their work, their perfect timing, and their skill at characterization. Mrs. Smith's "Kitty" had an airy grace, a daring and a nonchalance that placed it as perhaps equalling her work in "The Last Mrs. Cheyney." Mrs. Hyde's character work was undoubtedly the cleverest she has ever done.

And what an array of new talent! John Colwell in the masculine lead of "Bob Brown" showed a poise and a finesse that proved surprising even to those who have seen his work in a few minor roles. His voice was especially fine, its intonations and inflections making it one of the most pleasing among men Players yet developed by the association.

The ingenue role of "Dierdre Lessing" introduced a wholly new Player, Katherine McDaniel, and those in last night's audience maintain that it was a wonderful introduction. Her work in the second act was especially fine as the scene might so easily have been over emphasized.

While the part of "Madge Livingston" was secondary to that of "Dierdre," the manner in which it was interpreted by Katherine Barr gave it an equal value. Her work was smoothly professional, and these two young women offer rare promise of material for future leading roles.

Men Predominate

Men predominated in the cast and with the exception of Wylie Carlyle and Robert Horn, all were new to Players' productions. Carlyle's previous work has been principally in character roles. In "Let Us Be Gay" he demonstrated an equal facility in playing straight parts, and his "Bruce Keen" was thoroughly convincing. Robert Horn did a nice bit of character work as "Whitman" the butler, always patient under Mrs. Boucicault's gibes.

Strictly new were John N. Miller as "Townley Town," and J. Leslie Steffenson as "Wallace Grainger." But they will not remain strangers, for undoubtedly bigger roles await them in future Community Plays. For even in a cast of such uniformly high quality their work was outstanding.

While the minor roles of doorman, chauffeur and maid offered smaller opportunity to John Hoy, John Knox and Kristine Nielsen, the quality of their work was in accord with that offered by the principals and each contributed a definite part to the smoothness of the play as a whole.

Incidentally "Let Us Be Gay" is a regular fashion revue, and some of the loveliest gowns imaginable delight the eye. Scenery and stage settings are striking, and for additional pleasure of last night's audience were those two delightful youngsters, Johnnie Stout, violinist, and Olive Schweitzer, pianist. Kreisler and Cadman compositions were played, and several encore numbers were demanded by an appreciative audience.

Tonight's musical program will be by Georgia Belle Walton, violinist, and Russell Rowland, pianist. The play will begin promptly at 8:15 o'clock, and indications from ticket sales, point to a capacity house at Ebell auditorium.

FRESNO STATE MAPS AMBITIOUS CARD

FRESNO, Dec. 9.—(INS)—An ambitious gridiron schedule for 1934, to include games with Santa Clara and Utah, was being made today by Fresno State college's board of athletic control.

Resumption of relations with Nevada is planned next year following a breach over eligibility rules, it was announced. An 11-game schedule, including games with Arizona State, the California Ramblers and all five Far Western conference rivals, is planned. Practice games are to be played with Whittier and Redlands.

THOUSANDS THRONG LIGHTED STREETS AS HOLIDAY EVENT LAUNCHED IN S. A. LAST NIGHT

Sparkling with clusters of multi-colored lights and redolent with decorative touches of pine and fir, Santa Ana downtown streets last night were transformed into fairyland as thousands of residents and visitors from neighboring communities and farming sections trooped the sidewalks, thrilled with the dazzling sight and fired with the eager zest of holiday shopping.

Fourth street as well as Main street, principal thoroughfares of the business section, were lanes of dazzling lights and Christmas trees, through which the smiling, happy throng wandered up and down, pausing every few steps to view the attractive displays in the blazing shop windows along the streets.

Contributing to the festive spirit of the occasion, marking the formal opening of the local Christmas season, was the splendid musical program broadcast from the roof of the First National bank building under auspices of the Santa Ana Merchants association. The program in charge of Jerry Hall, master of ceremonies, who sang several numbers, included selections by the Elks double quartet and the Musical Arts Octette, whose offerings were well received by the milling crowds on the streets. Members of the Elk singing group included W. H. Galliene, W. C. Vieria, Dr. K. H. Sutherland, J. A. Miller, A. J. Garroway, F. L. Gibbs, Frank C. Pierce and H. P. Filer. Miss Ruth Armstrong, well known local pianist, acted as accompanist.

Those singing with the Musical Arts Octette were Sally Lee Scales, Holly Lash Visel, Irma Huffman May, Marie Bishop, Edith Cornell, Cecile Fross Willits, June Burns and Bess Neale, which group also was accompanied by Miss Armstrong.

Walter Swanberger, president of the Santa Ana Merchants association, made a brief address, welcoming the shoppers to the city. Through the use of amplifiers, the program was heard throughout the entire business section. The broadcast was made possible through the courtesy of Foster-Barker Music company, and the entertainment was arranged by Jerry Hall, Milton Foster and Gene Kahen.

Stores in the downtown district yesterday experienced the first heavy onslaught of holiday buying, and right up to the closing hour floors, aisles and stairways were crowded with gift seekers.

Beginning December 18 all stores will remain open during evenings until 9 p. m., it was announced. The best dressed show window will be judged within two weeks, it was added. Merchants from Pomona, Glendale, Anaheim, Fullerton and Orange have been invited by President Swanberger of the Merchants association to act as judges.

BEVERLY HILLS, Dec. 9. (To the Editor of The Register:) U. S. Cabinet members can change, but when Notre Dame changes coaches you are getting into real news. Anderson just ran into bad breaks. I bet he will go somewhere else and turn out a great team, and Elmer Layden will come there and do great, for he won't be following Rockne. There just didn't happen to be anybody living that could follow Rockne. And while we are on football and off the gold, this Columbia College that's coming here New Year's, being New Yorkers they never was away from home so naturally they are not known out here. "My wife called to the duke, who replied. We groped a way to his room and heard the reassuring shout:

"'I am coming out.'

"'Make for the stairs,' shouted my wife.

"'I'll do that,' said the duke.

"That was the last we heard of him. We came out thinking that he was safe. We were horrified when we found he was not outside but we thought he might have wandered in the grounds.

MEETING CALLED TO LAUNCH SCOUT DRIVE

Launching the intensive effort in the "Crusade for Understanding," 50 men, interested in the Boy Scouts of America, will assemble at Scout headquarters, 715 North Sycamore street, Monday afternoon, for final instructions in carrying on the work for the coming week, it was announced today by C. L. Pritchard, who is chairman of the business division.

"Our purpose," Pritchard stated, "is to call upon every firm and individual in the business section of the city to acquaint them with the needs of character building activities for our boys and the methods which Scouting is using in providing them.

"We now have," he emphasized, "more than 500 active boys in Scouting in the Santa Ana district, and it is necessary that we not only provide the minimum of service to the scoutmasters who serve them, but that we may provide for the expansion of the movement to take care of the demands being made upon us by parents and institutions for additional organization."

Other leaders who will have charge of battalions include Majors Homer C. Chance, Fred Rowland, Alvin F. Nowotny and Harold Brown.

MARY PICKFORD ASKS DIVORCE FROM DOUGLAS

Their marriage became public a week later, and from the first it was popular with their millions of film fans.

For the first six years of their wedded life they both boasted that they dined together every night. They never were separated overnight for ten years, they said with pride.

Rumors Spread

Meantime, the motion picture colony in general began to point to Miss Pickford and Fairbanks as the answer to all charges that husbands and wives were taken easily and cast aside as easily in Hollywood.

Any time there came a hint of scandal among lesser film people, Fairbanks and Miss Pickford immediately were mentioned by those anxious to claim the screen colony no worse than any other place.

In this manner they became known as "the ideal mates," and their marriage became "the perfect romance."

Fairbanks had been in England some time when Miss Pickford suddenly announced a definite separation.

It was said at the time her action followed a message from Fairbanks in which he notified her he no longer wished to assume any of the expenditures in connection with the upkeep of Pickfair.

By a coincidence, Douglas Fairbanks jr., who has been living in Europe with his father, returned to Hollywood within an hour of the time Miss Pickford filed suit against his father.

Young Fairbanks, recently divorced by Joan Crawford, screen star, said he had no previous knowledge of Miss Pickford's suit against his father.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS MAINTAINS SILENCE

LONDON, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Douglas Fairbanks will maintain "dignified silence" regarding Mary Pickford's divorce action against him, and will build himself a bigger and better home to take the place of the Pickford-Fairbanks mansion, Pickfair, his press representative said today.

"Mr. Fairbanks will continue his dignified silence regarding personal matters. He will return to California after making a picture in Spain and one in England.

"Since he has deeded Pickfair to Miss Pickford, Mr. Fairbanks will build another home on his 2000-acre citrus ranch in Southern California, one of the finest true Spanish type. Architects working on the Spanish picture will gather data for plans in Andalusia."

4 MARRIAGES DISSOLVED BY COURT ACTION

Three interlocutory decrees of divorce were granted yesterday in superior court and one marriage annulled. The annulment and two of the interlocutory decrees were handed down by Superior Judge James L. Allen and the other decree was granted by Presiding Judge G. K. Scovel.

In Judge Scovel's court Harold Kenny was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce from Mrs. Edith Kennedy on the grounds of desertion. The Kennys were married December 24, 1929, and separated June 8, 1930, when Kenny was transferred from Norfolk, Va., to San Pedro. According to his testimony, when he was transferred he came to California and as soon as he was located sent money to his wife for the trip to California but she refused to join him.

Mrs. Helen McClain had her marriage to Manford McClain annulled when she told Judge Allen that she and McClain lived together for more than seven years before she discovered that he had a wife living from whom he had not secured a divorce. The McClains were maried October 16, 1926, and separated November 26, last.

Mrs. Alice Van Keirsbulck received a divorce decree from Adiel Van Keirsbulck who, at present is serving a sentence in the county jail for disturbing the peace. She also was given custody of the two children of the couple. She told the court that her husband had abused her and the children on many occasions and at one time had threatened to slay her with a hatchet. She was forced to call deputy sheriffs to protect her. They were maried September 11, 1917, in Belgium and separated November 7, last.

Mrs. Elma Quinn was given a decree from Glenn Quinn, custody of the couple's two children and $10 monthly for their support.

She told the court that Quinn habitually stayed out until a late hour at night and refused to tell her where he had been. She alleges that because she was afraid to stay at their home alone with the children her husband would take her to her mother's where she was forced to remain until past midnight. She also accused Quinn of abusing and striking her and spending his income for expensive cars instead of necessities for his family.

REVOLT IN SPAIN BREAKS AT DAWN

Barcelona, on the east coast, were warned of the anarchists' plans. All available police and civil guardsmen were mobilized.

Early this morning the revolt was proclaimed with bombs. Five were exploded, two in the San Francisco church.

MAKES APPEAL TO PUBLIC TO SUPPORT PARK

public meeting will be held in the board of supervisor's room in the courthouse to which all who are interested were invited to attend, Smart announced.

Immediate Action

In a statement made today, Chairman Smart declared that Santa Ana can have a 20-acre park right away if the work is done fast enough.

"We can have the park improved with a swimming pool, pleasure devices, tables, etc., if we can work fast enough," he declared. "The improvements can be provided without direct investment on the part of the city, if we can be speedy.

"The federal government will provide the labor and materials under the C. W. A. All that is required is that we furnish the land, and we have a plan to do this. What is required is that at least 100 citizens shall agree to pay, if called upon to do so, not to exceed $25 per year for 10 years to finance the purchase of land.

"There is a good prospect that all the money paid in, as provided, will be returned to subscribers, but we cannot explain the plan here. We will need to get at least 100 subscribers to this project by Tuesday night, December 12, or this opportunity will pass. We ask you to be one of these subscribers, and to act quickly.

Asks Support

"Obviously, there is not time for members of the committee to call upon everybody in so short a time. Will you do your part by filling out the subscription blank in The Register today and mailing it to me or to the chamber of commerce? There will be no obligation incurred, unless 100 or more sign, and the park is acquired and improved."

Smart said that there is little doubt but what more than a sufficient number of men will be secured to finance the park. Among prominent citizens who have signed subscriptions already are J. P. Baumgartner, Mayor Paul Witmer C. E. Walker, R. Carson Smith John Knox, Harry L. Hanson, J. S. Smart, W. D. Ranney, Hugh J. Lowe, J. W. Estes, Ray Adkinson and Fred Newcomb.

Navy Officer Hits New Low Mark

SECURITIES ACT VIOLATION CHARGED

Charged jointly with grand theft and violation of the corporate securities act, Timothy V. Shafer, 34, Long Beach beer salesman and Robert O. Gruwell, 39, Los Angeles, will have their preliminary hearings in the Santa Ana justice court on December 18 at 9 a. m.

Gruwell was arrested yesterday afternoon and was released after posting $2500 bail. Shafer was released yesterday on his own recognizance. Both men were in the local court in February, 1931, on charges of violating the corporate securities act after a complaint had been sworn by John Phillips, 920 North Olive street, charging that he was induced to buy $900 of alleged worthless stock in the Copper Conda Mines. Both Shafer and Gruwell were released at that time.

Under the new complaint filed by Phillips, the defendants are charged with grand theft of $900 for the stock and failing to secure a permit from the state corporation commission before selling stock.

REVOKE PERMIT OF MOTORIST FOR FIVE YEARS

Frederick Handy, who pleaded guilty to an accusation of failing to stop and render aid after an automobile accident, was granted probation for five years yesterday by Superior Judge James L. Allen. As a part of the terms of his probation Handy paid a fine of $400 and had his operator's license revoked for five years. The fine was paid yesterday afternoon.

Handy's arrest followed an automobile crash several weeks ago near the Eddie Martin Airport. Three persons were injured in the accident, and Handy was alleged to have stopped his automobile, started to return to the scene of the crash, then fled when he ascertained that passengers in the other car were injured.

At his probation hearing yesterday Handy told the court that he returned to the scene of the accident as soon afer the crash as he could stop his automobile. He lost his head and fled, he said, when he heard someone in the crowd that had gathered say, "Let's get the driver of the other car." Handy also told the court that he had consumed three glasses of beer a short time prior to the crash. Dr. Milo K. Tedstrom, Handy's physician, who examined him at the jail shortly after his arrest, declared that the youth was not intoxicated. Dr. Tedstrom testified that Handy is being treated for an illness that creates symptoms similar to those of intoxication.

MOTHER HELD ON CHARGE OF KILLING BABE

Arrested after officers were told she had killed her newborn child, Mrs. Rosa Ruiz, 26-year-old Indian woman of Garden Grove, is being held in the county jail on a charge of investigation of murder.

Deputy sheriffs went to her home yesterday to question her and were surprised when she led them to the body of the child, wrapped in black silk in a trunk. She said the child died soon after its birth on Thanksgiving night and that the father lived near Atwood. She has been separated from her husband four years.

Coroner Earl Abbey ordered an autopsy yesterday and it was found that the child, a girl, had lived but a brief time and came to its death from asphyxiation. An inquest will be held later. No charges had been filed by the district attorney at noon today.

Prices Raised On Third Grade Gas

Followng the recent change made by major oil companies, many independent dealers in Santa Ana and Southern California raised the price of third grade gasoline to 14½ cents today, still one-half cent lower than the majors.

The independent lines have been selling at 12½, 13 and 13½ cents, but most of them are believed to be using the new 14½ cent level. The price boost at Thanksgiving made by the majors raised the third grade fuel prices to 15 cents, with first grade at 17½ and ethyl at 19½.

AGREEMENT ON STATE ROYALTY FEES REACHED

Immediate resumption of activities in the Huntington Beach town lot field was forecast today following acceptance late yesterday by a majority of the oil operators of the state's schedule of royalties on oil produced from the state owned tidelands by means through "whipstocked" wells.

The last obstacle to settlement was removed yesterday afternoon in Sacramento, where Superior Judge Glenn handed down a decision that the state had authority to negotiate with the oil operators under the Oil Act of 1933.

The operators met at Memorial hall in the beach city at the call of H. R. Hamilton, an operator named previously to aid in carrying on negotiations with the state. Hamilton, who attended with others, conferences in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Sacremento, explained the schedule as advanced by State Finance Director Rolland Vandegrift.

More than two thirds of the operators with beach front interests signed the agreement, which calls for a scale of royalties ranging from five per cent for 50-barrel wells at present prices and allotments, to 42 per cent and up to 66 per cent where the output is over 3000 barrels and the price is over $1.75 per barrel.

Under present prices and allotments, the royalties to be paid the state are expected to average from seven to 10 per cent.

The meeting yesterday afternoon followed one held in Los Angeles in the morning and at which Thomas W. Simmons, chairman of the Oil Property Protective association, explained the situation to leaders in the association and others.

To Drop Suits

As a result of the acceptance by the operators of Vandegrift's proposition, suits brought against operators in the Huntington Beach field will be dropped, it is understood. Operators who refuse to sign the agreement will find themselves defendants in suits brought by the state, it was indicated.

The Sacramento suit was filed by Assemblyman James Utt of Orange county, who instituted it as a taxpayer in order to get a decision on the legality of tidelands royalties. It had been indicated that the operators would ask Governor Rolph to call a special session of the legislature to enact favorable legislation, in the event the court ruled adversely in the Utt suit.

Witnesses at the Sacramento court hearing were Cecil M. Rood, who with H. R. Hamilton was representative of the operators, and Assemblymen Utt and Ted Craig. Testimony included the statement that south of the earth fault at Huntington Beach, oil flows freely, while north of the fault, pumping equipment is required.

Vandegrift estimates that the state will receive approximately $1,000,000 yearly through the tidelands royalties.

No More Permits

A clause in the Vandegrift agreement was the source of some speculation today. It provides that no more permits for "whipstocked" wells are to be issued. Permits already issued are not affected. Operators expressed the opinion that this particular clause might be modified somewhat later on.

Simmons, in a report of the conferences to The Register, expressed appreciation of the work of Assemblymen Utt and Craig in the settlement. A great mass of detail still remains to be worked out, he said.

Cecil Rood and the two assemblymen remained in the north after the others returned in order to thresh out certain features of the settlement. They are expected home over the week end.

Several hundred men were thrown out of employment when the state brought suit against the Termo company, Major companies which had been buying the oil, refused to take further quantities, and many operators closed down operations pending a settlement. One major oil corporation has been buying oil, but impounding 80 per cent.

With the operators definitely accepting the agreement, drilling operations on a number of wells are expected to be resumed at once. A number of oil men took out permits but have been waiting a definite agreement before starting drilling work.

AWARD CONTRACT FOR NEW BRIDGE

Construction of a steel and concrete bridge across the Santa Ana river as a part of the program for opening a direct route from Anaheim to Newport Beach is expected to get under way within a short time. Announcement has been made that the state department of public works had awarded the contract for the structure to Franklin B. Gridley on his low bid of $41,832, according to officials of the county road department.

The bridge, according to information obtained from the office of Superintendent of Highways Neff, will be a part of the Buaro road extension connecting with Fairview road. The entire project will be financed by the state.

PASSAGE OF BONDS FOR CITY HALL, COUNTY HARBOR URGED BY FOUR SPEAKERS AT FORUM

Voters last night were urged to support bond issues which will appear on the ballot in the December 19 election by speakers arguing in their favor, at an open meeting held in the People's Forum, Third and Bush streets. These bond issues were the Newport Harbor bonds, the Santa Ana city hall bonds and the Central Valley Water project bonds.

In calling the meeting to order, Harry S. Gerhart, director of the People's Forum, voiced his disappointment over the poor attendance, which he added, indicated a lack of interest on the part of many citizens in matters that affect them directly.

W. B. Martin, well known local realtor, was the first speaker on the program. He told his listeners of the opportunity offered the citizens of Santa Ana to secure a new city hall at a total cost of $100,000, of which amount the United States government will contribute $30,000 as a free gift to the community. Urging the voters to vote a $70,000 bond issue, the speaker added that the bonds, if voted, will be sold to the federal government, thus saving commissions and other incidentals.

Answers Questions

He also took occasion to deny rumors that the proposed structure is intended for temporary use, assuring the audience that the building, if erected, will remain there for the next 15 or 20 years. Replying to questions from the floor, he stressed the point that none but Orange county labor will be used, and that every effort will be made to restrict the purchase of material to local concerns. While most of the questions from the floor centered about employment of local labor and awarding the work to local contractors, one query sought information as to whether there would be space in the new building for the establishment of an emergency dressing station. The speaker was not in position to give a definite answer to the latter query but indicated that in all probability such a service would be maintained in the new building.

Arguments for a favorable vote on the $170,000,000 Great Central Valley water project, were presented by State Senator Frank W. Mixter, of Exeter, Tulare county. He stressed the point that the project, if approved by the voters of the state, will put $170,000,000 in federal money into immediate circulation in California, create jobs for 25,000 men for about three years, and will once and for all solve the water problems of the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys.

Harbor Benefits

The principal address of the evening was made by Deputy District Attorney James L. Davis, who in an enthusiastic speech, pointing to the present state of unemployment as revealed by official registration figures and the imperative need of relief, urged the voters to support the harbor improvement program. Calling attention to the employment possibilities incidental to the realization of the project, including the influx of a large number of wealthy people, building homes and maintaining pleasure craft in the harbor, Davis declared that the harbor bond issue will do more good to the people of the county than the two other issues on the ballot.

Touching upon the unemployment situation, he cited unemployment figures and cited several glaring cases of suffering, in which connection he also brought out that 76 per cent of the $1,835,441 to be spent on the project, will go to labor.

Unqualified approval of the harbor project as an undertaking that will bring wealth and revenue to the county, was voiced by Captain Thomas Drake, famous skipper of Seattle, who said that Orange county harbor offers better possibilities for improvements and development than any other harbor on the Pacific coast. He stressed the climatic conditions, the absence of stormy weather and resultant smooth waters, natural scenery and recreational facilities, which are more and more attracting attention of owners of yachts and pleasure craft.

According to both complaints Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Naish were injured on October 24, last as they were walking across the intersection at Main and Washington streets in this city. The complaint alleges that they were struck down by an automobile owned by the Powell Mortuary.

One of them, a spot cash deal, was made when W. B. Martin, prominent Santa Ana realtor, sold a six-unit, modern and completely furnished court at 1311 South Main street to Katie Duckett. Another deal which has been completed and which now is in escrow is the sale of the old Temple theater at Third and Bush streets, now occupied by the People's Forum, to Charles E. Walker, well known Santa Ana theater man.

The purchase price on the theater and property was around $15,000, it was reported. The property was purchased from the Vaughn estate, handled through the administrator of the estate, Charles Wagner.

Plans for the operation of the theater building are yet indefinite, Walker said today, but probably it will continue to be leased as a forum. Walker does not plan to operate the building as another show at the present time, he said.

Considerable repair and remodeling on the theater building is expected to be done soon.

Noted Craft And Master At Newport

New arrivals at the Orange county harbor yesterday included the 37-foot schooner "Progress," owned and sailed by Captain Thomas Drake, 70, master mariner of the old school, whose trips around the world in his one-man crew craft, have been featured in newspapers and shipping publications.

Captain Drake was crossing the Atlantic alone in his tiny ship when Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh made his epoch-making flight over the same body of water. In the course of his travels the old skipper, now claiming Seattle as his home, has traversed the seven seas, and visited not less than 117 ports. He was born in England, and sailed before the mast for a number of years before he secured his master's papers.

He comes from an old family of seafaring men, and he traces his connections to Sir Francis Drake of historical fame. He has sailed the seas for 55 years, 20 of them alone. Three of his ships were wrecked, and on one occasion he drifted in a rowboat for several days before being picked up by a freighter. He is leaving today his course for Hilo, the principal for San Diego, and then will set port of the island of Hawaii.

AGREEMENT ON STATE ROYALTY FEES REACHED

Immediate resumption of activities in the Huntington Beach town lot field was forecast today following acceptance late yesterday by a majority of the oil operators of the state's schedule of royalties on oil produced from the state owned tidelands by means through "whipstocked" wells.

The last obstacle to settlement was removed yesterday afternoon in Sacramento, where Superior Judge Glenn handed down a decision that the state had authority to negotiate with the oil operators under the Oil Act of 1933.

The operators met at Memorial hall in the beach city at the call of H. R. Hamilton, an operator named previously to aid in carrying on negotiations with the state. Hamilton, who attended with others, conferences in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Sacramento, explained the schedule as advanced by State Finance Director Rolland Vandegrift.

More than two thirds of the operators with beach front interests signed the agreement, which calls for a scale of royalties ranging from five per cent for 50-barrel wells at present prices and allotments, to 42 per cent and up to 66 per cent where the output is over 3000 barrels and the price is over $1.75 per barrel.

Under present prices and allotments, the royalties to be paid the state are expected to average from seven to 10 per cent.

The meeting yesterday afternoon followed one held in Los Angeles in the morning and at which Thomas W. Simmons, chairman of the Oil Property Protective association, explained the situation to leaders in the association and others.

To Drop Suits

As a result of the acceptance by the operators of Vandegrift's proposition, suits brought against operators in the Huntington Beach field will be dropped, it is understood. Operators who refuse to sign the agreement will find themselves defendants in suits brought by the state, it was indicated.

One of them, a spot cash deal, was made when W. B. Martin, prominent Santa Ana realtor, sold a six-unit, modern and completely furnished court at 1311 South Main street to Katie Duckett. The purchase price was $16,500. The property formerly belonged to the Commonwealth Building-Loan association of Long Beach.

Another deal which has been completed and which now is in escrow is the sale of the old Temple theater at Third and Bush streets, now occupied by the People's Forum, to Charles E. Walker, well known Santa Ana theater man.

The purchase price on the theater and property was around $15,000, it was reported. The property was purchased from the Vaughn estate, handled through the administrator of the estate, Charles Wagner.

Plans for the operation of the theater building are yet indefinite, Walker said today, but probably it will continue to be leased as a forum. Walker does not plan to operate the building as another show at the present time, he said.

Considerable repair and remodeling on the theater building is expected to be done soon.

Noted Craft And Master At Newport

New arrivals at the Orange county harbor yesterday included the 37-foot schooner "Progress," owned and sailed by Captain Thomas Drake, 70, master mariner of the old school, whose trips around the world in his one-man craft, have been featured in newspapers and shipping publications.

Captain Drake was crossing the Atlantic alone in his tiny ship when Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh made his epoch-making flight over the same body of water. In the course of his travels the old skipper, now claiming Seattle as his home, has traversed the seven seas, and visited not less than 117 ports. He was born in England, and sailed before the mast for a number of years before he secured his master's papers.

He comes from an old family of seafaring men, and he traces his connections to Sir Francis Drake of historical fame. He has sailed the seas for 55 years, 20 of them alone. Three of his ships were wrecked, and on one occasion he drifted in a rowboat for several days before being picked up by a freighter. He is leaving today for San Diego, and then will set his course for Hilo, the principal port of the island of Hawaii.

TAX-TACTICS

This year's delay in the opening of Congress is going to give opponents of the new tax revision program a peculiar advantage.

Preliminary schedules drafted by the House Ways and Means Subcommittee are apt to make gentlemen in the higher brackets rather bilious, so don't be surprised at any extraordinary tactics of parliamentary delay.

If final action can be held off long enough the Treasury Department will be in a tough spot getting income forms out to the taxpayers for return by March 15.

* * *

It is even conceivable that a status quo could be forced on income rates for another year although those guiding the bill refuse to admit it publicly.

The point is the idea of delay has already been thought up.

Those destined to be in opposition expect at least to force some material compromises from the administration.

* * *

Strategy would be based on this premise. By convening in January Congress loses a full month for debate of revenue legislation.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue will have to print new forms this year to encompass all the expected changes. Ordinarily they start mailing out the blanks late in January and early in February. It takes time to prepare new forms and they can be printed only after the bill is law

Thus filibustering tactics of one sort or another at the coming session would press the administration close to a bad hole.

Simple, isn't it?

BARLEYCORN

In some quarters the suggestion has even been advanced that liquor revenue be made part of a separate bill also contemplating control so that the controversial whiskey-tax problem wouldn't slow things down too much.

So far there doesn't seem to be much disposition to adopt this idea.

Write it down, though, there will be hot fighting on the subject of liquor taxes.

* * *

The Senate Finance Committee is going into a joint huddle with the Ways and Means group Monday over whiskey schedules.

Some of the committee members already are looking with anguished eyes at the state taxes being imposed. Their point is that the 21st Amendment should drive some 400,000 or 500,000 men out of the bootleg racket. It won't if joint state and federal taxes make whiskey so high the bootlegger can still compete.

Rep. McClintic of Oklahoma probably will be on the firing line leading the fight for low revenue schedules.

* * *

DRIED

An interesting phenomena occurred at the four code hearings for the distilleries, the brewers, the wholesalers and the importers although it occasioned no comment.

Uncle Sam was sitting in judgment on articles regulating the trade until such time as Congress gets around to permanent legislation.

* * *

Code-makers went much farther with the liquor business than any other industry in the matter of regulation Production was controlled, import quotas were fixed, etc.

Seemingly the Anti-Saloon league wasn't interested in controlling whiskey output.

The answer is otherwise. The dry strategy is to have nothing at all to do with regulation, their leaders being convinced a mess will be made of repeal. They want to say "I told you so" rather than share the slightest mite of responsibility.

* * *

RIVALS

Outcome of the meeting in New York of the National Manufacturers' Association is going to be followed with interest here.

The NMA meeting was called to devise ways and means of elbowing into the Washington spotlight held so long by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

A bid to the trade associations to join the Manufacturers in beating the base drum in Congress this winter probably will be the outcome.

* * *

The Manufacturers' Association has long been jealous of the Chamber's prestige.

When the big shots wanted to impress Congress in the past with the importance of passing or blocking a given bill they usually got the Chamber to go on record—and then to work.

A feeling is growing here that the U. S. Chamber won't be so popular this year Certainly they aren't with the administration.

* * *

CANADIAN

Canadian officials here are hopeful for special treatment in the matter of liquor quotas for three reasons:

The Dominion sacrificed some $25,000,000 annual revenue by passing legislation prohibiting manufacture of whiskey obviously intended for the United States during its dry period;

She buys so much American goods, and,

She has the only large stock of rye and bourbon in the world adaptable for blending with green American spirits.

* * *

GLASS

Despite his 72 years Senator Carter Glass got out of a sick bed the other day when he thought his beloved bank bill was being belittled.

As he was leaving the Senate Office Building he stopped to explain his absence from the public eye as follows:

"I have been in a dentist's chair trying to get well and in the hands of a sculptor who is preparing for my death."

* * *

NOTES

During the recent liquor code hearings several gentlemen from Canada were attentive spectators. . . . A Canadian newspaper man identified them as big Dominion racketeers who had made fortunes running whiskey across the border. . . . They probably were waiting to ascertain their quota under the New Deal. . . . Rep. Dickstein of New York is still chasing the Nazis. . . . Not very far though. . . . Wonder what they're going to do about the poisoning of industrial alcohol now the country's wet again?

NEW YORK
By James McMullin

REPUBLICANS

Local Republicans have high hopes of results from the latest bulletin issued by the National Committee which quotes Democratic criticism of the New Deal at length. They claim to have evidence from all over the country—particularly from the Middle West—that the President's personal popularity doesn't extend to his advisers or his measures.

They expect him to swing farther to the left as time goes on and they plan to rehabilitate their fortunes in '34 by concentrating fire on whatever part of his program has produced the most antagonism in a given key district.

One of their problems is to keep Ogden Mills from shooting the works too much. Mills is burned up by various aspects of the Roosevelt program and has several times felt the urge to express himself publicly So far he has been dissuaded—but it's hard to hold in a war horse champing at the bit.

* * *

PUBLIC WORKS

Criticism of the PWA becomes more and more vehement hereabouts. Extreme caution to prevent private capital from benefiting is blamed for slowing up the program to the point of absurdity.

Critics admit that some progress has been made in the last few weeks but insist that bureaucratic inefficiency and political motives have checked the hiring of at least half a million men who might be at work by now. This aspect of the situation will get a thorough airing under Republican auspices when Congress meets.

* * *

NRA

Local insiders note that a quiet but definite shift is taking place in NRA policy. They predict that efforts to enforce codes on small local businesses will gradually be abandoned without saying anything about it and that future attention will be 90 per cent focussed on a few large industries.

That's why New York failed to get excited about Judge Akerman's anti-NRA decision in Florida. They figure it fits in with what is coming anyway.

The new policy will simplify administration problems by not trying to enforce the unenforceable. The blanket code idea is on the way to the nearest exit—having served its purpose of mobilizing public opinion. Most of the big industries like their codes pretty well—so relations should be more amicable from now on. Of course there will be further efforts to transfer code control back to private hands.

* * *

TELEPHONE

General Johnson's announcement that he would impose a wage and hour code on American Telephone and Telegraph was a surprise to Wall Street. It was understood in high quarters that the corporation had taken care to cultivate the friendliest relations with Washington But disgruntled employees entered complaints and there were too many of them to be ignored. The company is expected to acquiesce gracefully in General Johnson's ideas.

New York leaders pay high tribute to American Telephone for the progress it has been making behind the scenes in building new business to replace the removal of instruments for depression reasons.

* * *

RUSSIA

The Russians have kept their commercial credit record clean by an ingenious system of bookkeeping. Licenses to import machinery or other goods were not approved unless a volume of exports for the same period was recorded which would bring in enough foreign exchange to pay the import bills. They adhered rigidly to this system even when it slowed up the five-year plan and were always sure they could meet commitments to pay.

The Russians used to have a bias in favor of German goods because so many of their engineers were German-trained. Colonel Hugh Cooper helped overcome that. He imported American drills at his own expense for the Dnieprostroi job and proved how much better they would stand up in service. They will now buy all the American machinery they can get.

The Germans had a stunt of importing a single piece of American machinery in order to copy it in their factories for the Russian market. The copies looked the part but they just couldn't take it when the pressure got strenuous.

* * *

GERMANY

In a way the Germans were brighter than we about this Russian business. Many of the German short-term credits that caused so much agony were used to further Germany's business with Russia. She used our capital and earned the returns herself One reason why she has been able to pay off so much of this short-term stuff lately is because the Russians have been remitting dollars to Germany.

* * *

TRADE

Britain is handicapped by the Canadian timber lobby in negotiating a new Russian trade agreement to compete with us. The lobby insists on the article it forced into the Ottawa agreement which prohibits importing goods that get state aid. This amounts to a boycott of Russian lumber. The Russians resent it — which gives us a nice head start over England.

SIDELIGHTS

The automobile people are talking about a first quarter production of 500,000 cars in 1934. . . . That would be 35 per cent above the same quarter this year. . . . Production is not yet up to normal replacement figures despite improvement. . . . Canadian nickel exports were four times as great during the past six months as during the same period last year. . . . Our Washington column has commented on how useful nickel can be in case of war. . . . Municipal refunding may be difficult. . . . City authorities are not kicking in with requested information to their bankers

TAX-TACTICS

This year's delay in the opening of Congress is going to give opponents of the new tax revision program a peculiar advantage.

Preliminary schedules drafted by the House Ways and Means Subcommittee are apt to make gentlemen in the higher brackets rather bilious, so don't be surprised at any extraordinary tactics of parliamentary delay.

If final action can be held off long enough the Treasury Department will be in a tough spot getting income forms out to the taxpayers for return by March 15.

* * *

It is even conceivable that a status quo could be forced on income rates for another year although those guiding the bill refuse to admit it publicly.

The point is the idea of delay has already been thought up.

Those destined to be in opposition expect at least to force some material compromises from the administration.

* * *

Strategy would be based on this premise. By convening in January Congress loses a full month for debate of revenue legislation.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue will have to print new forms this year to encompass all the expected changes. Ordinarily they start mailing out the blanks late in January and early in February. It takes time to prepare new forms and they can be printed only after the bill is law.

Thus filibustering tactics of one sort or another at the coming session would press the administration close to a bad hole.

Simple, isn't it?

BARLEYCORN

In some quarters the suggestion has even been advanced that liquor revenue be made part of a separate bill also contemplating control so that the controversial whiskey-tax problem wouldn't slow things down too much.

So far there doesn't seem to be much disposition to adopt this idea.

Write it down, though, there will be hot fighting on the subject of liquor taxes.

* * *

The Senate Finance Committee is going into a joint huddle with the Ways and Means group Monday over whiskey schedules.

Some of the committee members already are looking with anguished eyes at the state taxes being imposed. Their point is that the 21st Amendment should drive some 400,000 or 500,000 men out of the bootleg racket. It won't if joint state and federal taxes make whiskey so high the bootlegger can still compete.

Rep. McClintic of Oklahoma probably will be on the firing line leading the fight for low revenue schedules.

* * *

DRIED

An interesting phenomena occurred at the four code hearings for the distilleries, the brewers, the wholesalers and the importers although it occasioned no comment.

Uncle Sam was sitting in judgment on articles regulating the trade until such time as Congress gets around to permanent legislation.

* * *

Code-makers went much farther with the liquor business than any other industry in the matter of regulation. Production was controlled, import quotas were fixed, etc.

Seemingly the Anti-Saloon league wasn't interested in controlling whiskey output.

The answer is otherwise. The dry strategy is to have nothing at all to do with regulation, their leaders being convinced a mess will be made of repeal. They want to say "I told you so" rather than share the slightest mite of responsibility.

* * *

RIVALS

Outcome of the meeting in New York of the National Manufacturers' Association is going to be followed with interest here.

The NMA meeting was called to devise ways and means of elbowing into the Washington spotlight held so long by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

A bid to the trade associations to join the Manufacturers in beating the base drum in Congress this winter probably will be the outcome.

* * *

The Manufacturers' Association has long been jealous of the Chamber's prestige.

When the big shots wanted to impress Congress in the past with the importance of passing or blocking a given bill they usually got the Chamber to go on record—and then to work.

A feeling is growing here that the U. S. Chamber won't be so popular this year. Certainly they aren't with the administration.

* * *

CANADIAN

Canadian officials here are hopeful for special treatment in the matter of liquor quotas for three reasons:

The Dominion sacrificed some $25,000,000 annual revenue by passing legislation prohibiting manufacture of whiskey obviously intended for the United States during its dry period:

She buys so much American goods, and,

She has the only large stock of rye and bourbon in the world adaptable for blending with green American spirits.

* * *

GLASS

Despite his 72 years Senator Carter Glass got out of a sick bed the other day when he thought his beloved bank bill was being belittled.

As he was leaving the Senate Office Building he stopped to explain his absence from the public eye as follows:

"I have been in a dentist's chair trying to get well and in the hands of a sculptor who is preparing for my death."

* * *

NOTES

During the recent liquor code hearings several gentlemen from Canada were attentive spectators. . . . A Canadian newspaper man identified them as big Dominion racketeers who had made fortunes running whiskey across the border. . . . They probably were waiting to ascertain their quota under the New Deal. . . . Rep. Dickstein of New York is still chasing the Nazis. . . . Not very far though. . . . Wonder what they're going to do about the poisoning of industrial alcohol now the country's wet again?

NEW YORK
By James McMullin

REPUBLICANS

Local Republicans have high hopes of results from the latest bulletin issued by the National Committee which quotes Democratic criticism of the New Deal at length. They claim to have evidence from all over the country—particularly from the Middle West—that the President's personal popularity doesn't extend to his advisers or his measures.

They expect him to swing farther to the left as time goes on and they plan to rehabilitate their fortunes in '34 by concentrating fire on whatever part of his program has produced the most antagonism in a given key district.

One of their problems is to keep Ogden Mills from shooting the works too much. Mills is burned up by various aspects of the Roosevelt program and has several times felt the urge to express himself publicly. So far he has been dissuaded—but it's hard to hold in a war horse champing at the bit.

* * *

PUBLIC WORKS

Criticism of the PWA becomes more and more vehement hereabouts. Extreme caution to prevent private capital from benefiting is blamed for slowing up the program to the point of absurdity.

Critics admit that some progress has been made in the last few weeks but insist that bureaucratic inefficiency and political motives have checked the hiring of at least half a million men who might be at work by now. This aspect of the situation will get a thorough airing under Republican auspices when Congress meets.

* * *

N R A

Local insiders note that a quiet but definite shift is taking place in NRA policy. They predict that efforts to enforce codes on small local businesses will gradually be abandoned without saying anything about it and that future attention will be 90 per cent focussed on a few large industries.

That's why New York failed to get excited about Judge Akerman's anti-NRA decision in Florida. They figure it fits in with what is coming anyway.

The new policy will simplify administration problems by not trying to enforce the unenforceable. The blanket code idea is on the way to the nearest exit—having served its purpose of mobilizing public opinion. Most of the big industries like their codes pretty well—so relations should be more amicable from now on. Of course there will be further efforts to transfer code control back to private hands.

* * *

TELEPHONE

General Johnson's announcement that he would impose a wage and hour code on American Telephone and Telegraph was a surprise to Wall Street. It was understood in high quarters that the corporation had taken care to cultivate the friendliest relations with Washington. But disgruntled employees entered complaints and there were too many of them to be ignored. The company is expected to acquiesce gracefully in General Johnson's ideas.

New York leaders pay high tribute to American Telephone for the progress it has been making behind the scenes in building new business to replace the removal of instruments for depression reasons.

* * *

RUSSIA

The Russians have kept their commercial credit record clean by an ingenious system of bookkeeping. Licenses to import machinery or other goods were not approved unless a volume of exports for the same period was recorded which would bring in enough foreign exchange to pay the import bills. They adhered rigidly to this system even when it slowed up the five-year plan and were always sure they could meet commitments to pay.

The Russians used to have a bias in favor of German goods because so many of their engineers were German-trained. Colonel Hugh Cooper helped overcome that. He imported American drills at his own expense for the Dnieprostroi job and proved how much better they would stand up in service. They will now buy all the American machinery they can get.

The Germans had a stunt of importing a single piece of American machinery in order to copy it in their factories for the Russian market. The copies looked the part but they just couldn't take it when the pressure got strenuous.

* * *

GERMANY

In a way the Germans were brighter than we about this Russian business. Many of the German short-term credits that caused so much agony were used to further Germany's business with Russia. She used our capital and earned the returns herself. One reason why she has been able to pay off so much of this short-term stuff lately is because the Russians have been remitting dollars to Germany.

* * *

TRADE

Britain is handicapped by the Canadian timber lobby in negotiating a new Russian trade agreement to compete with us. The lobby insists on the article it forced into the Ottawa agreement which prohibits importing goods that get state aid. This amounts to a boycott of Russian lumber. The Russians resent it — which gives us a nice head start over England.

* * *

SIDELIGHTS

The automobile people are talking about a first quarter production of 500,000 cars in 1934. . . . That would be 35 per cent above the same quarter this year. . . . Production is not yet up to normal replacement figures despite improvement. . . . Canadian nickel exports were four times as great during the past six months as during the same period last year. . . . Our Washington column has commented on how useful nickel can be in case of war. . . . Municipal refunding may be difficult. . . . City authorities are not kicking in with requested information to their bankers.

BEACH CLUBS HEAR TALES OF SECRET SERVICE

Interesting reminiscenses of incidents while serving in the United States secret service, told in an entertaining manner by Captain Don Wilkie, now a resident of Laguna Beach, featured the program of a joint luncheon meeting of the Huntington Beach Rotary club and the Newport Harbor Service club, held yesterday at the Bear Cafe in Huntington Beach. Included among those present was a large delegation of harbor boosters, headed by A. B. Rousselle, Balboa, as well as several visiting Rotarfans from Santa Ana.

Referring to the time when Theodore Roosevelt was president, and Captain Wilkie's father was connected with the United States secret service, in charge of the White House detail, Captain Wilkie said that it is not generally known that for once the chief executive of the nation was reported missing for 26 hours. As to be expected, the officials of the secret service, including Captain Wilkie's father, were worried but did not dare to even hint at the cause of their anxiety. To make matters worse, the two secret service men were also reported missing. Subsequent developments revealed that the former president, apparently tired of being constantly followed by secret service men, and with the aid of his son, Kermit Roosevelt, had camped out in outdoor fashion in Rock Creek park. But while the popular "Teddy" and his son thought they had eluded the guards for a brief spell, the reports of the latter proved that they had been in touch right along with the doings of the White House occupants, even to the point of describing the odd jobs performed by the distinguished campers.

Captain Wilkie also told of an amusing incident during the administration of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, involving a member of the British embassy who by his frequent visits to the White House had come to be regarded as a sort of nuisance by the presidential secret service detail. One afternoon the Britisher, attired in formal afternoon dress, appeared at the presidential mansion just as the president, dressed in hiking togs, stepped out from the main entrance. The president invited his caller to come along for a walk, which invitation to the Englishman, according to the precepts of the court of St. James, accepted as a matter of course. Before the strenuous Rough Rider, an ardent lover of outdoor life, and his tophatted companion were back at the White House, they had explored little frequented sections of Rock Creek park and waded across several streams. The Englishman plainly showed the effects of the outing. It goes without saying that his calls at the White House became less frequent.

START SEARCH FOR MISSING STUDENT

Search for two missing persons in Santa Ana was started yesterday by police with reports of the absence of Albert Burkett, 16, 2311 Santiago street, student at the Santa Ana high school and Lewis Newberg, 68, 702½ Orange avenue, cobbler in Santa Ana for the past two months.

F. A. Burkett, father of the missing youth, told police that his son was last seen at the high school Thursday morning and had not attended classes or been home since that time. He was described as six feet two inches, 190 pounds, and wearing a chamois jacket and grey woolen trousers.

Newberg rented a house from J. A. Ketscher, 1067 East Fourth street, and had not paid rent for two months. He was last seen on November 29, one week after returning from the Orange county hospital after an operation. Although he left most of his belongings in the house, it is believed that he resumed his travels on the highway. He has worked for several shoe repair shops in Santa Ana and was considered an excellent workman, police learned. He was five feet six inches tall and weighed 130 pounds.

TOBACCO STOLEN

R. R. Miller, market proprietor at 320 South Main street, reported to police today that 25 cartons of Christmas cigarettes were stolen last night by someone who lifted a canvas covering and reached through the iron grillwork on the market.

ECONOMIST IS OPPOSED TO HIGH TARIFF

"Home industries are being ruined by high tariffs and the wealth of nations is dependent on the inter-relation of trade in countries, not isolation and selfishness," it was declared by Dr. Graham Allen Laing last night in speaking before more than 300 persons at the next to last meeting in his series under auspices of the adult education department in the Frances E. Willard school.

"It is a fallacy of big business that countries like the United States can be self-supporting if deprived of imports," Dr. Laing said. "Although only six or seven per cent of our national income is invested in foreign trade, many fundamental industries draw largely from foreign countries for materials, including automobiles, telephone, furniture, fertilizer, hardware, electric, beauty preparations, jewelry, groceries, clothing, radio, tobacco and stationery."

The lecturer pointed out that advocates of high tariff barriers claim that low priced foreign goods will be kept out and that the standard of living will be raised. This is false reasoning, Dr. Laing said, because the high tariff does not mean high wages and that the only example of countries where the principle held true was between United States and England. In all other instances, England with its former absence of tariffs, had far better standards than its neighbors with higher taxes on imports.

Cites Objection

"There is no foundation for the argument that high tariffs protect infant industries," Dr. Laing charged. "New industries do need help but they finally grow up and then the profit-grasping business leaders use the tariff as an instrument to increase their incomes. This argument is only valid if the industry cannot survive without assistance and this type of an enterprise is of no value to a country."

The lecturer scored William Randolph Hearst for his exhaustive campaign for "Buy American" and said that writers like Garret Garett and Samuel Crowther were hard at work trying to convince the American people that high tariffs were necessary for recovery from the depression.

"One of the faults of present day society is that all trading is regarded as swindling and someone always tries to come out ahead. American newspapers, especially a leading chain, shout that the British are trying to put over something on the United States. The British press retaliates with counter claims and antagonism is built up, war is encouraged. Every country endeavors to increase its exports and decrease imports at the expense of its neighbors.

"There is a growing integration of the world in becoming an economic unit. The exchange of surpluses is the keynote of world trade. Nature did not distribute products equally in all countries and exports must be stimulated to bring about an equitable supply in all parts of the earth.

"The tendency to raise tariffs cannot be blamed wholly on the States," Dr. Laing concluded. "It is a world fault and has grown from generation to generation. It resolves into two conclusions, if we maintain the present standard of living, there must be more world cooperation and if there is a continued attempt to interfere with trade, it is more liable to bring ruin and chaos to society."

DEMAND PEACE IN ACTION AT YOUTH MEETING

A large group of Orange county young people last night attended the meeting of Southern California Congress of Youth at the Los Angeles County First Methodist church, where resolutions were sent to 10 international peace organizations in various countries urging them to "redouble their efforts against the rising tide of war preparation."

Two thousand were in attendance at the session where Albert Hamilton and Alonza Reynolds, two young men who were formally expelled from U. C. L. A. for the sole reason that they refused military training, and the mothers of the two men presented messages. Chester Williams presided, and Dr. Frank Toothaker spoke briefly in place of Dr. Frank Fagerburg who found it impossible to attend, protesting compulsory training in military tactics in public schools.

A resolution was passed calling on the Regents of the University to discontinue compulsory training in the university. A motion picture, "All Quiet on the Western Front," the film presented by Carl Laemmle for the movement, was shown.

The young people tonight are sponsoring a meeting at Belmont High school, auditorium to consider action on Governor Rolph's attitude on "Mob Law" in the San Jose lynchings.

INSURANCE MONEY SOUGHT BY WOMAN

Allegations that the Continental Casualty Company had refused to continue payments due her under an accident and health policy Clara L. Lutschg has filed suit demanding judgment of $2100 against the company and a court order for continuance of payments.

In her suit Mrs. Lutschg alleges that she purchased an accident and health policy from the insurance company January 7, 1925. Under the policy the company agreed to pay her $100 monthly for a total disability for so long as the disability continued.

She alleged that she has been totally disabled since April 1, 1931 and under the doctor's care for the past 31 months. The insurance company, she alleges, paid her $1000 and has since failed to continue payments until at present there is a balance of $2100 due her.

ECONOMIST IS OPPOSED TO HIGH TARIFF

"Home industries are being ruined by high tariffs and the wealth of nations is dependent on the inter-relation of trade in countries, not isolation and selfishness," it was declared by Dr. Graham Allen Laing last night in speaking before more than 300 persons at the next to last meeting in his series under auspices of the adult education department in the Frances E. Willard school.

"It is a fallacy of big business that countries like the United States can be self-supporting if deprived of imports," Dr. Laing said. "Although only six or seven per cent of our national income is invested in foreign trade, many fundamental industries draw largely from foreign countries for materials, including automobiles, telephone, furniture, fertilizer, hardware, electric, beauty preparations, jewelry, groceries, clothing, radio, tobacco and stationery."

The lecturer pointed out that advocates of high tariff barriers claim that low priced foreign goods will be kept out and that the standard of living will be raised. This is false reasoning, Dr. Laing said, because the high tariff does not mean high wages and that the only example of countries where the principle held true was between United States and England. In all other instances, England with its former absence of tariffs, had far better standards than its neighbors with higher taxes on imports.

Cites Objection

"There is no foundation for the argument that high tariffs protect infant industries," Dr. Laing charged. "New industries do need help but they finally grow up and then the profit-grasping business leaders use the tariff as an instrument to increase their incomes. This argument is only valid if the industry cannot survive without assistance and this type of an enterprise is of no value to a country."

The lecturer scored William Randolph Hearst for his exhaustive campaign for "Buy American" and said that writers like Garret Garett and Samuel Crowther were hard at work trying to convince the American people that high tariffs were necessary for recovery from the depression.

"One of the faults of present day society is that all trading is regarded as swindling and someone always tries to come out ahead. American newspapers, especially a leading chain, shout that the British are trying to put over something on the United States. The British press retaliates with counter claims and antagonism is built up, war is encouraged. Every country endeavors to increase its exports and decrease imports at the expense of its neighbors.

"There is a growing integration of the world in becoming an economic unit. The exchange of surpluses is the keynote of world trade. Nature did not distribute products equally in all countries and exports must be stimulated to bring about an equitable supply in all parts of the earth.

"The tendency to raise tariffs cannot be blamed wholly on the States," Dr. Laing concluded. "It is a world fault and has grown from generation to generation. It resolves into two conclusions, if we maintain the present standard of living, there must be more world cooperation and if there is a continued attempt to interfere with trade, it is more liable to bring ruin and chaos to society."

DEMAND PEACE IN ACTION AT YOUTH MEETING

A large group of Orange county young people last night attended the meeting of Southern California Congress of Youth at the Los Angeles County First Methodist church, where resolutions were sent to 10 international peace organizations in various countries urging them to "redouble their efforts against the rising tide of war preparation."

Two thousand were in attendance at the session where Albert Hamilton and Alonza Reynolds, two young men who were formally expelled from U. C. L. A. for the sole reason that they refused military training, and the mothers of the two men presented messages. Chester Williams presided, and Dr. Frank Toothaker spoke briefly in place of Dr. Frank Fagerburg who found it impossible to attend, protesting compulsory training in military tactics in public schools.

A resolution was passed calling on the Regents of the University to discontinue compulsory training in the university. A motion picture, "All Quiet on the Western Front," the film presented by Carl Laemmle for the movement, was shown.

The young people tonight are sponsoring a meeting at Belmont High school, auditorium to consider action on Governor Rolph's attitude on "Mob Law" in the San Jose lynchings.

INSURANCE MONEY SOUGHT BY WOMAN

Allegations that the Continental Casualty Company had refused to continue payments due her under an accident and health policy Clara L. Lutschg has filed suit demanding judgment of $2100 against the company and a court order for continuance of payments.

In her suit Mrs. Lutschg alleges that she purchased an accident and health policy from the insurance company January 7, 1925. Under the policy the company agreed to pay her $100 monthly for a total disability for so long as the disability continued.

She alleged that she has been totally disabled since April 1, 1931 and under the doctor's care for the past 31 months. The insurance company, she alleges, paid her $1000 and has since failed to continue payments until at present there is a balance of $2100 due her.

For the LOVE of EVE

by Lucy Walling

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Eve Bayless, pretty assistant to Earle Barnes, advertising manager of Bixby's department store, marries Dick Rader, a construction superintendent. Dick is sent to take charge of a construction job in the Adirondacks. It will require at least a year to complete but Eve refuses to give up her work and go with him.

Mona Allen, copy writer, dislikes Eve and is constantly causing trouble at the office. She is responsible for several mistakes for which Eve is blamed. Mona is friendly with Theron Reece who continues to force unwelcome attentions on Eve.

Unknown to Dick, Eve has been playing the stock market, borrowing money from her mother and sister. She loses this, as well as all her own savings and $400 Dick left in the bank.

Mona invites Eve to dinner and Eve, anxious not to offend her, accepts the invitation. Mona contrives to take Eve to a roadhouse where Theron Reece appears. Eve dislikes Reece. She leaves the others, becomes lost and spends the night at a farm house.

Next day Reece telephones. He frightens Eve by declaring he is in love with her and insinuating that Dick has been carrying on flirtations. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXIX

All day Sunday Eve stayed in the apartment. She felt tired and spent after the nerve-wracking experiences of the night before. There was no doubt in her mind that Mona Allen was responsible for what had happened—Mona whose invitation to Eve to take dinner with her had seemed so friendly! Mona had been ingenious, as usual, but no one could doubt that Theron Reece's appearance the minute Eve was alone had not been carefully planned.

At first angrily, Eve tried to think how she could make the other girl pay for her tricks. It was time for Mona to learn that two could play the same game, Eve told herself. Her slippers had been ruined by the rough roads and her dress was torn. Certainly Mona should be made to pay!

Gradually, however, Eve came to consider the matter more calmly. By Monday morning she had decided that it would be best to ignore the whole affair. No doubt Mona had an alibi well rehearsed and would be only too glad to recite it, her blue eyes wide open and looking completely innocent as she did so.

"I'm not going to be put on the defensive for an attack she made on me," Eve told Arlene, after relating all that had happened Saturday night.

But it was Mona herself who brought up the subject. She entered the office, removed her hat and a moment later was beside Eve's desk. "Whatever became of you Saturday night?" she demanded. "I was so worried! The boy friend and I met a man he knew who invited us to have a drink. We were in a booth at the opposite end of the room and when we came back Reece told us you had gone. In a way I don't blame you. That place is an awful frost. I'd never had gone there if I'd known what it was like!"

"I went home," Eve told her, and that was the last word she said or the subject. Never again, Eve was resolved, would Mona have an opportunity to place her in an awkward position. Hereafter she would show the other girl the civilities their office work required and nothing more.

* * *

But such resolutions were easier made than kept. In the days that followed Eve was constantly facing petty annoyances—small matters that became increasingly irritating because apparently there was no explanation for them. Objects would be missing from Eve's desk—her fountain pen, the vanity case she kept in a desk drawer, leaves from her calendar pad on which she had jotted memoranda, or bits of copy not yet seen by Mr. Barnes. The things which disappeared were always objects the lack of which would cause inconvenience to Eve herself but were too trivial to code to the attention of the advertising manager. Eve, of course, blamed Mona Allen. She concluded that the other girl was working her mischief with greater care.

"What would you do?" one day Eve asked Arlene.

"I'd go to Barnes about it," Arlene advised.

"Oh, I couldn't! He wouldn't like it and he'd only think me catty."

"I don't see why! You'd merely be protecting yourself—asserting your rights. Do you think for one minute that a man would let another man get away with what Mona's doing? Of course he would not! I don't think a busybody. No one does. But there's a difference between being meddlesome and standing up for yourself."

As it happened Eve did not find it necessary to complain to Barnes about Mona. Two days later Arlene returned unexpectedly to the office for something she had forgotten when leaving to go to lunch and found Mona going through the drawers of her desk. The situation was too much even for one of Mona's impudence to carry off with nonchalence.

"I—I was just—" she began with a nervous laugh.

"Yes, I see," Arlene said. "You were just going through my desk, weren't you? Now listen. I understand your racket and the next time anything is mislaid in this office I'm going straight to Earle Barnes and tell him who's responsible."

"I was only looking for—some copy paper," Mona tried to defend herself.

"What's wrong with that stack of copy paper over there in its usual place?"

"Oh! There is some, isn't there? I didn't see any this morning. Charles must have brought down a new supply."

"There was plenty there this morning. He brought it down yesterday."

* * *

With this Arlene tumbled things back into the desk drawers and locked them. Mona forced an amused smile, retreated to her desk and began to type with the appearance of great industry. Arlene hastened out to join Eve at a belated luncheon.

Eve shared her elation over the proof of Mona's treachery. "You'll not be annoyed by her again!" Arlene promised. Eve wished she could be as certain of this as Arlene seemed to be.

"Let's celebrate tonight," proposed Arlene. "We haven't eaten at that new Italian restaurant on Twelfth street yet. I've heard that the food is cheap and very good. I could get real chummy with a plate of spaghetti. We could see the early show at the Palace afterwards."

"I'd love to," agreed Eve. "I haven't been to a movie since Dick left. It's no fun to go alone. But what about Sam? I thought he monopolized all your time these days."

"He's giving a talk before the City club tonight," said Arlene with evident pride. "Sam's smart, Eve. He could go a long way if he really wanted to."

'Of course he's smart. And of course he could go a long way. Can't you make him want to, Arlene?"

"Sometimes I think I could. Oh, I don't know what I want, Eve! I—I liked George Bliss, you know. A lot, I guess. But I had sense enough to see that he didn't care. I've seen too many girls waste years on a man who wasn't interested. Sam's been grand to me. He thinks of things to do for me almost before I've wished for them. No matter what happened, Sam would stand by. After all, that means something to a woman."

November came. Gray November nights. Sometimes Eve ate dinner down town, dreading to go home to the lonely apartment. Sometimes she stopped at the delicatessen shop for sandwiches and cookies to carry home with her. These, with a cup of hot chocolate, would serve for a meal. After dinner she would curl up in Dick's favorite chair and read—or try to read. The words didn't always make sense, with the November rain beating drearily against the window. Dick's work kept him out in all kinds of weather. Eve worried for fear he might become ill and no one would let her know. Suppose he would not want her to know! After all, Dick had seemed willing enough to go away and leave her. Perhaps he had not wanted her to go with him. What, after all, did she know of Dick's real thoughts? And what about those mysterious Tuesday night absences which he had never explained?

Sometimes Eve wrote long letters to her husband, teling of her doubts and loneliness, but these were always destroyed next morning. Pride would not let her send them.

She was finding it more difficult than she had dreamed it could be to save the money she owed her mother and her sister. She worried about this, about Dick, about Theron Reece. And another thir that caused her to worry was Dorothy McElhinney's little smile of satisfaction whenever the two met. It was as though the young teacher knew something about Dick and his plans that Eve did not know. The thought was almost unbearable.

DAM STATISTICS GIVEN STUDENTS

Colonel S. H. Finley, secretary of the Metropolitan Water District board spoke to the students of the Business Institute and Secretarial School, 415 N. Sycamore, Santa Ana at their regular assembly period yesterday, concerning Boulder Dam which he recently visited. Among other things he made the following statements:

"The dam was considered 15 years ago; 87 per cent of the water originates in the upper basin states; the water in the lake formed would cover 7,500,000 acres; the dam is 740 feet tall, 1200 feet long at the top, 45 feet wide at the top, 650 feet wide at the bottom.

"The lake is 115 miles long, 40 miles wide. Enough water to supply California for two years if it didn't rain a drop; it is the largest artificial water lake in the world; 1 per cent of the water is silt and would fill the Panama Canal in a few years; there is enough cement in the dam to build a standard road from San Francisco to New York, and enough steel to put up the Empire State building in New York."

Editor Register—

Dear Sir: I wonder what would be said of the person who is invited and calls at a house and breaks bread with the inhabitants and the said person goes home and criticises everything that has been placed on the table, the service, the home and the donors, who probably have done the best they can in their humble way? I'd hate to think that such a thing had been done to me, and I'd hate to do it to any of my friends, rich or poor.

I was born in England, lived 15 years in Russia, was married to a Russian engineer, spent 23 years in South America and a few years in California. I really cannot say that there are more dirty, petty, lying thieves or immorality and drunkenness in one place than another. I can't say anything against one or the other. I would not like to.

I wonder if the persons who talk about the ignorance and superstition of these so-called uncivilized countries have really stopped to think how much damage they are doing to their own country. They don't stop to think that what they say is read by people who come from those countries that I could say much for, rather than against.

In South America they have a saying—"Dime con quien andas y te dire quien eres." Tell me with whom you associate and I will tell you what you are Miss Pearl Nicholson's low ninth grade citizenship class is studying departments of city government. Committees have been formed to investigate the different departments in Santa Ana, and many interesting reports have been made as a result of the project.

An outstanding feature of Monday's class period was a talk by the chief of Santa Ana's police department, Floyd Howard, who outlined aims and functions of the department. Donald Lowen acted as chairman of the meeting and introduced the speaker.

Committees which have been working on these projects include the following: Police department, Donald Lowen, Velma Chittock, Helen Paul, Ellen Blake, Gus McQuistion; health department, Dulcie Walker, Velma Walker, Edward DeMaretz, Clark Sharon, Mae McGhehey; fire department, Peggy Suddath, Norma Lundak, Charlotte Stafford, Floyd Spessard, Bob Kloess, George Kidd; water department, Lyle Moyer, Henry Coleman, Norvell Beadles, George Burris, Bob Hoyt, Cecil Weber; welfare department, Charlotte Johnson, Blanche Irvins; department of education, Darlene Fay, Upton Pett, Kenneth Wolff, Harold Roll.

Toy Airplane Display

Ben Hyland, low seventh grader, has interested the student body and faculty in his display of toy airplanes. Each of the little wooden planes shows skill in construction and colorings. With each plane Ben has placed a definite label telling the type and its use.

There are two dozen models on display in the main exhibit case. During the recent study of "Modern Transportation," in Miss Pearl Nicholson's class, Ben gave a report on the many models of planes he has studied.

Class Exhibits

Ferris Scott's low seventh grade classes have completed notebooks, which are arranged in the school library. The books are filled with facts which have been brought out during the elementary course of general science, including general information and reports on scientists who have influenced modern living. Some of those studied include Louis Pasteur, Alexander Bell, Robert Fuller, Wright Brothers and Eli Whitney. Many reports on the Hoover Dam have been collected during the past quarter.

Furniture Display

Harold Moomaw's ninth grade woodwork classes have been studying the California School Craft furniture designed by Claud E. Nihart, supervisor of Industrial Arts in Los Angeles schools. During the past week several pieces of furniture made by Latrop boys have been on display in the main hall. The end tables were made by Lyle Moyer and Lloyd Franke; the stools were made by Clark Sharon and Fred Mercado, and a magazine rack was made by Ed Calvin.

Each member of the class has made a pencil and letter holder in addition to some other piece of work.

Teachers' Luncheon

Dr. Norman Fenton, noted child guidance director in California, was guest of honor and speaker at a faculty luncheon held recently. Dr. Fenton discussed many phases of child guidance and answered questions.

For the LOVE of EVE

by Lucy Walling

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Eve Bayless, pretty assistant to Earle Barnes, advertising manager of Bixby's department store, marries Dick Rader, a construction superintendent. Dick is sent to take charge of a construction job in the Adirondacks. It will require at least a year to complete but Eve refuses to give up her work and go with him.

Mona Allen, copy writer, dislikes Eve and is constantly causing trouble at the office. She is responsible for several mistakes for which Eve is blamed. Mona is friendly with Theron Reece who continues to force unwelcome attentions on Eve.

Unknown to Dick, Eve has been playing the stock market, borrowing money from her mother and sister. She loses this, as well as all her own savings and $400 Dick left in the bank.

Mona invites Eve to dinner and Eve, anxious not to offend her, accepts the invitation. Mona contrives to take Eve to a roadhouse where Theron Reece appears. Eve dislikes Reece. She leaves the others, becomes lost and spends the night at a farm house.

Next day Reece telephones. He frightens Eve by declaring he is in love with her and insinuating that Dick has been carrying on flirtations. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXIX

All day Sunday Eve stayed in the apartment. She felt tired and spent after the nerve-wracking experiences of the night before. There was no doubt in her mind that Mona Allen was responsible for what had happened—Mona whose invitation to Eve to take dinner with her had seemed so friendly! Mona had been ingenious, as usual, but no one could doubt that Theron Reece's appearance the minute Eve was alone had not been carefully planned.

At first angrily, Eve tried to think how she could make the other girl pay for her tricks. It was time for Mona to learn that two could play the same game, Eve told herself. Her slippers had been ruined by the rough roads and her dress was torn. Certainly Mona should be made to pay!

Gradually, however, Eve came to consider the matter more calmly. By Monday morning she had decided that it would be best to ignore the whole affair. No doubt Mona had an alibi well rehearsed and would be only too glad to recite it, her blue eyes wide open and looking completely innocent as she did so.

"I'm not going to be put on the defensive for an attack she made on me," Eve told Arlene, after relating all that had happened Saturday night.

But it was Mona herself who brought up the subject. She entered the office, removed her hat and a moment later was beside Eve's desk. "Whatever became of you Saturday night?" she demanded. "I was so worried! The boy friend and I met a man he knew who invited us to have a drink. We were in a booth at the opposite end of the room and when we came back Reece told us you had gone. In a way I don't blame you. That place is an awful frost. I'd never had gone there if I'd known what it was like!"

"I went home," Eve told her, and that was the last word she said on the subject. Never again, Eve was resolved, would Mona have an opportunity to place her in an awkward position. Hereafter she would show the other girl the civilities their office work required and nothing more.

* * *

But such resolutions were easier made than kept. In the days that followed Eve was constantly facing petty annoyances—small matters that became increasingly irritating because apparently there was no explanation for them. Objects would be missing from Eve's desk—her fountain pen, the vanity case she kept in a desk drawer, leaves from her calendar pad on which she had jotted memoranda, or bits of copy not yet seen by Mr. Barnes. The things which disappeared were always objects the lack of which would cause inconvenience to Eve herself but were too trivial to code to the attention of the advertising manager. Eve, of course, blamed Mona Allen. She concluded that the other girl was working her mischief with greater care.

"What would you do?" one day Eve asked Arlene.

"I'd go to Barnes about it," Arlene advised.

"Oh, I couldn't! He wouldn't like it and he'd only think me catty."

"I don't see why! You'd merely be protecting yourself—asserting your rights. Do you think for one minute that a man would let another man get away with what Mona's doing? Of course he would not! I don't like a busybody. No one does. But there's a difference between being meddlesome and standing up for yourself."

As it happened Eve did not find it necessary to complain to Barnes about Mona. Two days later Arlene returned unexpectedly to the office for something she had forgotten when leaving to go to lunch and found Mona going through the drawers of her desk. The situation was too much even for one of Mona's impudence to carry off with nonchalance.

"I—I was just—" she began with a nervous laugh.

"Yes, I see," Arlene said. "You were just going through my desk, weren't you? Now listen. I understand your racket and the next time anything is mislaid in this office I'm going straight to Earle Barnes and tell him who's responsible."

"I was only looking for—some copy paper," Mona tried to defend herself.

"What's wrong with that stack of copy paper over there in its usual place?"

"Oh! There is some, isn't there? I didn't see any this morning. Charles must have brought down a new supply."

"There was plenty there this morning. He brought it down yesterday."

* * *

With this Arlene tumbled things back into the desk drawers and locked them. Mona forced an amused smile, retreated to her desk and began to type with the appearance of great industry. Arlene hastened out to join Eve at a belated luncheon.

Eve shared her elation over the proof of Mona's treachery. "You'll not be annoyed by her again!" Arlene promised. Eve wished she could be as certain of this as Arlene seemed to be.

"Let's celebrate tonight," proposed Arlene. "We haven't eaten at that new Italian restaurant on Twelfth street yet. I've heard that the food is cheap and very good. I could get real chummy with a plate of spaghetti. We could see the early show at the Palace afterwards."

"I'd love to," agreed Eve. "I haven't been to a movie since Dick left. It's no fun to go alone. But what about Sam? I thought he monopolized all your time these days."

"He's giving a talk before the City club tonight," said Arlene with evident pride. "Sam's smart, Eve. He could go a long way if he really wanted to."

"Of course he's smart. And of course he could go a long way. Can't you make him want to, Arlene?"

"Sometimes I think I could. Oh, I don't know what I want, Eve! I—I liked George Bliss, you know. A lot, I guess. But I had sense enough to see that he didn't care. I've seen too many girls waste years on a man who wasn't interested. Sam's been grand to me. He thinks of things to do for me almost before I've wished for them. No matter what happened, Sam would stand by. After all, that means something to a woman."

November came. Gray November nights. Sometimes Eve ate dinner down town, dreading to go home to the lonely apartment. Sometimes she stopped at the delicatessen shop for sandwiches and cookies to carry home with her. These, with a cup of hot chocolate, would serve for a meal. After dinner she would curl up in Dick's favorite chair and read—or try to read. The words didn't always make sense, with the November rain beating drearily against the window. Dick's work kept him out in all kinds of weather. Eve worried for fear he might become ill and no one would let her know. Suppose he would not want her to know! After all, Dick had seemed willing enough to go away and leave her. Perhaps he had not wanted her to go with him. What, after all, did she know of Dick's real thoughts? And what about those mysterious Tuesday night absences which he had never explained?

Sometimes Eve wrote long letters to her husband, teling of her doubts and loneliness, but these were always destroyed next morning. Pride would not let her send them.

She was finding it more difficult than she had dreamed it could be to save the money she owed her mother and her sister. She worried about this, about Dick, about Theron Reece. And another thing that caused her to worry was Dorothy McElhinney's little smile of satisfaction whenever the two met. It was as though the young teacher knew something about Dick and his plans that Eve did not know. The thought was almost unbearable.

DAM STATISTICS GIVEN STUDENTS

Colonel S. H. Finley, secretary of the Metropolitan Water District board spoke to the students of the Business Institute and Secretarial School, 415 N. Sycamore, Santa Ana at their regular assembly period yesterday, concerning Boulder Dam which he recently visited. Among other things he made the following statements:

"The dam was considered 15 years ago; 87 per cent of the water originates in the upper basin states; the water in the lake formed would cover 7,500,000 acres; the dam is 740 feet tall, 1200 feet long at the top, 45 feet wide at the top, 650 feet wide at the bottom.

"The lake is 115 miles long, 40 miles wide. Enough water to supply California for two years if it didn't rain a drop; it is the largest artificial water lake in the world; 1 per cent of the water is silt and would fill the Panama Canal in a few years; there is enough cement in the dam to build a standard road from San Francisco to New York, and enough steel to put up the Empire State building in New York."

Editor Register—

Dear Sir: I wonder what would be said of the person who is invited and calls at a house and breaks bread with the inhabitants and the said person goes home and criticises everything that has been placed on the table, the service, the home and the donors, who probably have done the best they can in their humble way? I'd hate to think that such a thing had been done to me, and I'd hate to do it to any of my friends, rich or poor.

I was born in England, lived 15 years in Russia, was married to a Russian engineer, spent 23 years in South America and a few years in California. I really cannot say that there are more dirty, petty, lying thieves or immorality and drunkenness in one place than another. I can't say anything against one or the other. I would not like to.

I wonder if the persons who talk about the ignorance and superstition of these so-called uncivilized countries have really stopped to think how much damage they are doing to their own country. They don't stop to think that what they say is read by people who come from those countries that I could say much for, rather than against.

In South America they have a saying—"Dime con quien andas y te dire quien eres." Tell me with whom you associate and I will tell you what you are

Class Exhibits

Ferris Scott's low seventh grade classes have completed notebooks, which are arranged in the school library. The books are filled with facts which have been brought out during the elementary course of general science, including general information and reports on scientists who have influenced modern living. Some of those studied include Louis Pasteur, Alexander Bell, Robert Fuller, Wright Brothers and Eli Whitney. Many reports on the Hoover Dam have been collected during the past quarter.

Furniture Display

Harold Moomaw's ninth grade woodwork classes have been studying the California School Craft furniture designed by Claud E. Nihart, supervisor of Industrial Arts in Los Angeles schools. During the past week several pieces of furniture made by Lathrop boys have been on display in the main hall. The end tables were made by Lyle Moyer and Lloyd Franke; the stools were made by Clark Sharon and Fred Mercado, and a magazine rack was made by Ed Calvin.

Each member of the class has made a pencil and letter holder in addition to some other piece of work.

ORANGE, Dec. 9.—Miss Grace Lentz was the speaker at a meeting of the three groups of the Girls' Missionary society at Epworth hall Thursday night. Miss Lentz described programs given during the Christmas season at the hospital where she was a nurse in Chinkiang, China.

Christmas preparations in China among the Christian workers begins with opening Christmas boxes sent from home, Miss Lentz said, and gifts for the nurses and workers in the hospital are selected from them. A Christmas program is arranged for the nurses and the workers are given a meal different from everyday meals.

One of the events of the season is a feast of mein for the children in the valley below the hospital, Miss Lentz said. These children live in mud huts, windowless, and with but one door and beside the mein, which is served hot, there is candy for each child, the speaker said. So large are the crowds of persons who would like to attend these events, that it is necessary to have police guard the doors, said Miss Lentz, as she described the motley crew of ragged children.

The talk was supplemented by a Christmas program. Study groups met afterward.

CHURCH GROUP TOLD OF YULE TIME IN CHINA

ORANGE, Dec. 9.—Miss Grace Lentz was the speaker at a meeting of the three groups of the Girls' Missionary society at Epworth hall Thursday night. Miss Lentz described programs given during the Christmas season at the hospital where she was a nurse in Chinkiang, China.

Christmas preparations in China among the Christian workers begins with opening Christmas boxes sent from home, Miss Lentz said, and gifts for the nurses and workers in the hospital are selected from them. A Christmas program is arranged for the nurses and the workers are given a meal different from everyday meals.

One of the events of the season is a feast of mein for the children in the valley below the hospital, Miss Lentz said. These children live in mud huts, windowless, and with but one door and beside the mein, which is served hot, there is candy for each child, the speaker said. So large are the crowds of persons who would like to attend these events, that it is necessary to have police guard the doors, said Miss Lentz, as she described the motley crew of ragged children.

The talk was supplemented by a Christmas program. Study groups met afterward.

LAYDEN SIGNS 1-YEAR CONTRACT

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Now that everybody is letting down his shoulder straps and getting confidential with Notre Dame's private affairs, it seems only reasonable that International News Service, having exclusively announced months ago what would take place in connection with Notre Dame football, should today state exactly why it has.

Therefore, we'll start with the statement that Heartly ("Hunk") Anderson was not fired two nights ago or last night or last week. He was, to every practical purpose, fired last spring. Nothing that happened during the lamented season had a great deal to do with it, even to the five defeats and one tie.

These might all have been exalted victories without materially affecting the situation. It has been said that alumni criticism during the season brought on Anderson's denouement but this is the sheerest of idle blather. They may hear their share of alumni criticism at Notre Dame but they're fortunately situated. It's probably an oversight, but they just don't listen.

N. D. Feared Tradition Dying

Briefly, something of apparent unimportance happened during spring practice. I don't know what what it was. Neither does Anderson. It was nothing specific; it even was trivial to the eye. But it convinced the wrong man that the cherished Rockne tradition was too soon being forgotten. In this case, any time is too soon.

The result, eight months later, was the abrupt withdrawal of Anderson and the appointment of Elmer Layden, one of Rockne's celebrated "Horsemen," who is presumed to be the type that will revive this hallowed memory and make it live again.

Originally, the man who was to do this was Noble Kizer of Purdue. But Kizer was Harper's man and Harper, like Anderson, was carried away with the debris when the front office was swept out. The signing of Mal Elward as one of the assistant coaches, with Joe Boland and Tom Conley, shows how far they went with Kizer. Elward was the latter's coach of the ends at Purdue this year.

But as swiftly did the climax come that more than one feature of the original program had to be abandoned. They had intended, for instance, to make their official announcement of the change at the annual football dinner several nights ago but decided to withhold the tidings, rather than make a Banquo's feast of the affair. Probably the last man to think he had a chance a week ago was Layden.

Dorais, Kizer Passed Up

For, at that time, there were two men ahead of him, the second being Charley ("Gus") Dorais, of Detroit. He could have been the first without shocking anybody's sense of the eternal fitness of things. For, if Rockne caught the passes in the old days, it was Dorais who threw them. And in 20 years of coaching up and down the less frequented trails of the nation, he's never been known to have a really bad football team. However, Dorais is all right. He still has a good job and Harper and Anderson have none.

It is strange to see this pair, once so friendly and later so inimical, go out together but, if there's any comfort in the fact, Anderson has the last laugh. He had plenty of notice. Harper had practically none.

As for Kizer, he has no cause to rush to the nearest sorority house and seize a megaphone. He held off renewing with Purdue for reasons that are obvious. Now, through no fault of anybody's or his own, he has to make his peace at Lafayette. This might be pleasanter but it shouldn't be difficult, because he's fortunately situated, too.

He's one of those rarities you often hear about but all too seldom see. He's a football coaches' football coach.

THROUGH AT N. D.

OWNERS TALK UNIFORM BALL, RADIO, TRADES

BY JOHN C HOFFMAN

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—It now appears that the baseball magnates who attend the joint major league meeting here next Thursday will have something else to do besides stand around behind ill-smelling cigars and give out bright statements about the future of the game.

Before they stampede the nearest barroom, the magnates will discuss many issues, probably the most important of which are:

1. A uniform ball. (Each league insists it has the ideal ball. The American league ball is a little livelier. Both balls will continue to be white.)

2. The all-star inter-league game. (Most of the magnates do not like it, especially those in the National league. It's team lost the first one.)

3. The radio. (To make the broadcasters pay, to throw them out of the ball parks or to let it go at that. It's an annual question.)

4. An inter-league series during the season. (The late Bill Veeck liked the idea. Will Harridge, the American league president, doesn't. Nothing will be done about it.)

5. The spitball. (Restore it to anybody who would throw it or let it die when "Red" Faber returns to the farm. It may be restored to a generation of harassed pitchers.)

As is the custom, the magnates will announce the winners of the various championships (already known) and vigorously deny rumore of trades. But this time there will be some trading, if not more of it than has ever been the case at a joint meeting

For one thing, Connie Mack will decide whether George Earnshaw is going to the White Sox,, Boston or New York, or whether he will just remain with the Athletics in the hope that he can be persuaded to pitch some baseball. They may get around to announcing that Mickey Cochrane is going to manage the Detroit Tigers. McGillicudy will take Catcher Hayworth and cash for Mickey, if he can get it.

The magnates also may decide if Wes Ferrell will go to the Browns from Cleveland, if the Cubs will get Gus Suhr for Billy Herman, whether "Chick" Hafey will yet come to Chicago for "Kiki" Cuyler and if the Phillies can be persuaded to part with Jimmy Wilson so he can manage Cincinnati.

TROJANS, HUSKIES CLOSE GRID SEASON

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Washington and Southern California closed their football seasons today when they met before 25,000 fans at the Coliseum here.

The Trojans were top-heavy favorites to defeat the Huskies whose chief claim to gridiron prominence this year has been a victory over the otherwise undefeated Stanford eleven.

Coach Jimmy Phelan brought his men to town nearly three hours late yesterday, a fact that augured ill for S. C. Stanford put in a belated appearance Nov. 11 and then proceeded to topple the Trojans from their National championship throne.

KITTS NAMED COACH AT RICE INSTITUTE

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 9.—(UP)—Jimmy Kitts today replaced Jack Meagher as head football coach at Rice institute in a major athletic shakeup that has been brewing for months.

Kitts also will retain his position as head basketball coach.

NAVIN ADMITS DEAL PENDS FOR COCHRANE

DETROIT, Dec. 9. — (UP) — "Mickey" Cochrane, Philadelphia catcher, is being sought as manager of the Detroit Tigers, to succeed "Bucky" Harris, Frank Navin, owner of the club, admitted today.

HINT SPLIT IN COLLEGES OVER SCHOLARSHIPS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec 9.—Big business will be performed at the Pacific Coast conference meeting here next week. In fact, a dozen or more tentatively scheduled games hang in the balance.

In addition to the usual round of schedule making, the University of California is expected to have something to say about the present conference rules and structure.

The Bears will ask for an earlier start of fall practice. This year practically all of the serious injuries incurred by Bill Ingram's players occurred during the first four weeks of play.

The open dealing with prep school stars is expected to be aired again. Last year the conference rejected California's plan for "open dealings."

If there is to be a bombshell in this conference confab it will come in the faculty meting.

At the last meeting, held in Spokane, it was learned from reliable sources, a compromise was all that kept U. S. C. from withdrawing from the conference. The compromise resulted after Troy's representative, Prof. H. C. Willett, president of the faculty representatives, told the conference that U. S. C. wasn't ready to agree to a rule on scholarships.

It is said that U. S. C. was given the alternative of accepting a unanimous decision on scholarships awarded to athletes or withdrawal from the conference. Professor Willett said that U. S. C., in that case, would have to withdraw, but he would like a postponement of such decision until he had more time to discuss it with other Trojan officials. This was granted.

Willett told faculty representatives in no uncertain terms at the last meeting that the proposed ruling on scholarships was not acceptable to the president of his school, Rufus von KleinSmid. The Trojan institution has 200 admitted scholarships, most of which go to athletes, and these, the conference was informed, S. C. would not give up.

Outside the conference, there will be considerable scurrying around for games.

Santa Clara, for instance, has several tentative games hanging fire until the conference schedules are completed. One of these games is with the University of Utah. The Broncos are seeking a game with Southern California at Los Angeles, September 29, 1934.

Santa Clara meets Stanford the following week. Their California game is shifted to November. In case the U. S. C. game falls through, the Broncs will open against Stanford. This game comes one week in advance of the California-St. Mary's game, so there will not be a conflict, as in the past.

Michigan State is anxious to play Santa Clara, but the Broncos can do nothing until the rest of their schedule is completed and they can be assured of securing Kezar stadium.

"Gloomy Gus" Henderson, who preceded Howard Jones at U. S. C., wants to bring the University of Tulsa to play Santa Clara here, too.

HANSFORD LUCKY WINNER

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Georgie Hansford, erstwhile Los Angeles high school youngster, received a neat lesson in boxing last night but received a referee's decision in his 10-round bout with Tommy Paul, former featherweight champion, at Hollywood American Legion stadium. The decision was unpopular.

KIPKE OFFERED POST AT YALE: SHAKEUP SURE

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Harry Kipke, who has brought four consecutive Western conference football championships to the University of Michigan, is considering a coaching job in the East, it was learned at the Big Ten meeting today. It was said that Kipke has been approached by Yale and another Eastern school, and that he is giving serious consideration to both offers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(UP) — Yale alumni, dissatisfied with their alma mater's recent football misfortunes, campaigned today for a new deal at New Haven and a complete revision of the Eastern football system.

The Eli Bulldogs will be heard growling loudly tonight during the annual Yale barn party at Montclair, N. J., when some 300 alumni gather to honor the 1933 team. They honor the team every year, "win, lose or draw."

To remedy the topsy-turvy eastern situation, the campaign is to form an Eastern Intercollegiate Football conference, similar to the Midwest's Big Ten. It is understood alumni organizations of other Eastern schools already have been sounded out favorably.

As a preliminary step, a proposal will be offered tonight that Army's football team be stricken from the Yale schedule until the cadets conform to the Eli standards of player eligibility.

This proposal is to show schools that Yale means business in demanding that opponents meet them on an "even break" basis. It is expected to stimulate organization of the conference.

The proposal provides for an eastern "Big Eight," including Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Cornell, Brown, Columbia, Harvard, Princeton and Yale. Navy might be added later.

Concerning the "new deal" at New Haven the United Press learned authoritatively that the Blues have been assured of a general shake-up in the Yale football staff. Some of the well-informed old grads expect Coach Reggie Root to announce his resignation tonight.

GREENLEAF TOTTERS ON U. S. CUE THRONE

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Ralph Greenleaf today tottered on the pocket billiard throne of the world, which he has occupied 13 out of the past 15 years.

The titleholder lost his second straight game of the world's championship pocket billiard tournament to Bennie Allen of Kansas City, 247 to 58 in 23 innings. Greenleaf has won one game while losing two.

The class of competition being displayed in the tournament indicated Greenleaf would have to make a sensational rally if he is to retain his title.

P. C. L. OWNERS MAY STANDARDIZE PRICE

OAKLAND, Dec. 9.—(UP)—The annual meeting of the Pacific Coast league was set for Jan. 8 in a call issued today by Frank Herman, secretary.

The session, to be held here, is expected to discuss standardization of admission prices throughout the circuit and the adoption of the ball now used in the major leagues.

ANDERSON? HE SHOULD HAVE LOST HIS JOB, SAYS SCRIBE

BY HENRY McLEMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—"Hunk" Anderson has been fired, and I'll run the risk of being called undiplomatic and say he should have been. There will be no sob stories from this corner to the effect that the college fathers should not have expected him to fill the mighty Knute's shoes, and that he should be given one more chance.

If this sounds cold-blooded, that's all right, too. Business always has been a cold-blooded proposition, and football coaching, whether at Long Island Veterinary or Notre Dame, is a business. "Hunk" was hired to coach a winning team.

The record tells the story. His team was defeated five times this year. It lost to such schools as Carnegie Tech and Navy. That's not getting the maximum from the stuff at hand. "Hunk" himself would hardly deny that his Notre Dame squad had every physical advantage over the men of Carnegie and Navy.

Why, then, shouldn't he be fired? He didn't produce, did he? For example: You advertise yourself as a taxidermist, so a party engages you to stuff an elephant. If at the end of three years you had only the trunk and one ear stuffed, wouldn't the party have a perfect right to fire you and get another stuffer? True, he might not be able to stuff any faster, but at least he couldn't stuff any slower.

What I say of "Hunk" goes for all the other coaches who have failed. It's my opinion that Yale, if they hired Reggie Root for the same purpose Notre Dame did Anderson, has every right to kick him out. If Root was hired because he is a swell fellow and a good influence on young boys, then all right. But if he was engaged on his ability to send a smooth, smart team out on the field—well, did you see the Yales against Army? Against Princeton?

It's a great relief to get the Notre Dame coaching situation settled. It was getting so a fellow couldn't drive around the corner to get his brass knuckles soldered without being stopped by the elevator starter, the cigar store man, the cop on the corner, and the old fellow who peddles pistachio nuts across the street, for his opinion on what was wrong at Notre Dame, and was it true that David (Whataman) Hutton would succeed Jesse Harper and Professor Moley take Anderson's job?

Now, if the citizenry will just quit discussing and writing about what wine to serve with hamburgers, and whether its Chateu Yquem, 1914, or Hock, 1891, that goes with mashed potatoes, life will be worth living again.

MAY HEAD CUBS

Here is the man who may succeed the late William Veeck as president of the Chicago Cubs. He is William Walker, vice-president of the club who is serving as acting president until a board meeting of the club is held January 3. It is said Walker will be selected at this meeting.

LOU LITTLE IN QUANDARY OVER LION ITINERARY

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(INS)—Of the many problems that beset Lou Little today as he prepared his Columbia Lions for their Rose Bowl encounter with Stanford not the least is the how and when of the trip to Pasadena.

Before mapping out out the itinerary for the transcontinental journey, Lou thought it best to consult those who have made the trip before him—those coaches who took other teams to the Rose Bowl.

And the result is a mass of conflicting advice.

Bernie Bierman, who led the Tulane team to Pasadena two years ago, says Little should take his team directly to Los Angeles. "Jock" Sutherland, of Pittsburgh, thinks the Lions should stop off at Tucson, Ariz., for a week as the Panthers did and as Notre Dame always did in its jaunts to the coast.

And this advice doesn't meet with the approval of Steve Owen, coach of the professional Giants, and a third consultant. Steve thinks it will be a mistake to suddenly move a team from a dry climate into a damp one.

Meanwhile, almost every college between here and Pasadena has extended a stopover invitation to the Lions. Tulane forwarded one through the mayor of New Orleans, and others have been extended by Notre Dame, Northwestern, Alabama, Tennessee, and the University of California. Bill McMahan, graduate manager of athletics at California, wants the Lions to jump directly across the continent to Berkeley—and Little is giving the matter serious thought. The climate around San Francisco will be nearer to that of New York than can be obtained anywhere else.

S. A., HARBOR BALL CLUBS MIX SUNDAY

Orange county's two representatives in the Inter-City Winter league, the Western Gas team of Santa Ana and Newport Harbor, collide at the Costa Mesa ball park tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Manager Joe Erwin plans to start Sadine Maloof, a southpaw, with "Bomo" Koral receiving. "Moon" Mullins, former Huntington Beach high school ace, will be on the ridge for Newport Harbor. Melvin Beatty will catch.

The Santa Ana lineup includes Manager Erwin at first base, Joe Koral second, Farley third, Cook shortstop, and Lindsay, Fredricks and Farris, outfielders.

'BIG EIGHT' FORMED BY MOUNTAIN TEAMS

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 9.—(UP)—The "Big Eight" college athletic conference of leading schools of the Rocky Mountain states today sought its place in the athletic sun along with the well known "Big Three" "Big Ten" and "Big Six."

Eight colleges and universities of the Rocky Mountain conference withdrew last night from the conference and immediately set about establishing an intercollegiate athletic organization of their own, leaving only the "little four" to occupy the shell of the old league.

The schools which chose to set themselves apart from the smaller colleges in the mountain country were Denver university, Colorado university, Colorado college, Colorado Agriculture college, Utah university, Utah Agricultural college, Brigham Young university and Wyoming university.

JOE BOLAND TO BE LINE COACH AT NOTRE DAME

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Elmer Layden, former Notre Dame fullback and one of the famed "Four Horsemen," signed a contract at noon here today to serve as head football coach and athletic director at his alma mater. It is understood the contract runs for one year.

It was signed after Layden conferred in secret with the Rev. John F. O'Hara, acting president of Notre Dame.

Father O'Hara said that Joe Boland, a former tackle at Notre Dame and now coach at St. Thomas school, St. Paul, Minn., had signed a contract as line coach.

Tom Conley, an assistant, will be retained, Father O'Hara said.

No changes will be made in the freshman coaching staff for the time being.

Layden indicated that his successor at Duquesne university might be Joe Bach, another former Notre Dame player, and present line coach there. Both Bach and Boland were teammates of Layden.

Father O'Hara declined to discuss the amount of money involved.

"That part is sacred to the persons concerned," he said.

Tustin Hoop Hopes High, Play Downey

Out to regain the exalted position it occupied in 1931 and 1932, Tustin Hi's basketball team formally opens the new season next Tuesday, traveling to Downey for the inaugural.

Coach Bill Cole's Farmers won the Orange County league streamer for two years running, but slumped to fourth place in '33 behind San Juan Capistrano, Orange and Brea-Olinda. Their prospects this winter are regarded as fairly good, despite the loss of such men as Padias and Kiser, regulars, and Dills, McInteer, Arnett and Simington.

Returning lettermen are Dean Francis, forward; Wilson Seacord, center; and Ellsworth Teter, guard. Farmer followers predict regular berths for the trio, with Howard Spangler, and "Chuck" and Bob Forbes favored for the other starting roles. Spangler plays both forward and center. "Chuck" Forbes is a forward, his brother either a guard or forward. The Forbes boys are up from Class B play.

Other promising candidates are George Bronner, Walt Limbaugh, Edgar Pankey, Don Kennedy, Floyd Curl, Nelson Rogers, Ed Bristow, Don Watson, George Riddell and Jeff Richards, the last three former "Bees."

Tustin will enter the annual Huntington Beach Invitational December 14-15-16.

Orange Avenue Christian	0	2	.000
St. Peter's Lutheran	0	2	.000

Rallying in an extra three-minute session after a 30-30 deadlock at the end of the fourth quarter, the First Christians, runners-up for the first-half championship, defeated a stubborn United Presbyterian team 34-30, to maintain their clear record in the Community Church basketball league at the Y. M. C. A. last night. Costa Mesa Federated smothered St. Peter's Lutheran quintet, 57-22, in the second game.

Their victory ushered the Christians into a triple tie with the Mormons and First Methodists for first place in the standings.

With Center Kolkhorst setting a deadly pace for the winners, Forward White for the losers, the Christian-Presbyterian contest was one of the most interesting played this season. Although he made 10 points, Kolkhorst was the only Christian who could score a field goal in the first half, and the Presbyterians found themselves in the lead, 14-11, at the beginning of the third period. The Christians began peppering the basket with shots in the second half, however, and managed to tie the count 30-30 before the final whistle sounded. They sank two field goals in the extra session while holding their opponent scoreless.

Earning 18 and 20 points respectively, Center Siegel and Forward Hammerstein were responsible for Costa Mesa's easy triumph over St. Peter's Lutheran. The winners held a 23-10 margin at half-time.

The lineups:

No Place Like This Home

Hooks and Slides

by Bill Braucher

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Old Reggie McNamara was to climb aboard a bicycle for a six-day race at Cleveland, December 6. . . . The following figures show what experience he carries to the boards with him: It is his 97th six-day event. . . . In the previous 96 he covered some 114,000 miles at a pace that doesn't make for longevity . . . that is five times around the world, pedaled on a squirrel-cage track that is a maze of whirling wheels and pounding legs. . . . Despite a face and body scarred by countless falls, the "Iron Man" still can get up on those pedals and sprint with the best of them.

• • •

FOUR TEAMS—FOUR GUYS

Four of the All-America teams already selected agree on only four men — Warburton, Bukler, Crawford and Bernard. The four selectors unanimous on these choices are NEA Service, United Press, Associated Press and New York Evening Post.

The four unanimously chosen represent wide geographical differences. Warburton is the slippery little Southern California quarterback. Crawford is Duke's big right tackle, his school being at Durham, N. C. Johnny Buckler is the slashing halfback from the plains of West Point. Bernard is Michigan's splendid center.

LOTS OF ENDS

The NEA Service team, which was selected by seven coaches, in seven different sections of the country, named Skaldany of Pitt at right end, a choice in which only one other selector concurred. Other right ends named on the first team were Geisler and Smith, while at the left end of the line four men were named: Geisler, of Centenary; Matal, of Columbia; Manske, of Northwestern, and Larson, of Minnesota. Geisler, it seems, can play either end. In all, six ends were named for the two positions.

Rosenberg, the Trojans' big running guard, won three out of four selectors. Schammel, Iowa guard, carried two districts, and Schwammel, Oregon State tackle, did the same. Bill Corbus, Stanford's guard, got the call on three out of four teams.

TWO BACKFIELDS

Enough men for two backfields were named. Besides Warburton and Buckler, who were unanimous, the following men were nominated: Lund, of Minnesota; Franklin, Oregon State; Feathers, Tennessee; Sauer, Nebraska; Danowski, Fordham, and Purvis, Purdue. Two pickers named Sauer. Two named Lund. One vote each was accorded Purvis and Danowski.

The consensus would be a team having Skladany and Geisler, ends; Crawford and Schwammel, tackles; Bernard, center; Rosenberg and Corbus, guards; Warburton, quarterback; Buckler and Lund, halfbacks, and Sauer, fullback. None of the individual selections agreed entirely with the consensus.

TWO UNNAMED

This is a little song dedicated to two football players who do not stand a great chance of being named All-America this year . . . and I don't know why they're not named either . . . but in the opinions of coaches I have consulted they won't.

They are Mike Sebastian of Pitt and Ralph Kercheval of Kentucky . . . the Sebastian who weaved, bobbed, hand-sprung and catapulted through a frantically grabbing Notre Dame team last year . . . 45 yards of the wildest, most eccentric dancing these eyes have seen after searching many a gridiron.

• • •

TURNING POINT

And that game, by the way, one o fthe greatest upsets in years, seemed to be the turning point for the worse for Notre Dame . . . after that the South Benders, who had come in at odds of 7 to 1, never hit their old-time stride . . . which just shows you what one guy's sudden mad dash can do to a football team.

Again this year, against Nebraska . . . he was like a torrent continually writhing against a levee of well-filled cornhusker jerseys . . . they gave him that leather to lug again and again . . . and when it was all added up, he had a four-yard average to his credit . . . fifteen times carrying the ball.

• • •

KERCHEVAL STANDS UP, TOO

Kercheval . . . for the fine losing struggle he waged against Duke this year . . . with its All-American tackle, Freddy Crawford, standing in front of the line with great arms outstretched . . . before the game, the talk went around that the Blue Devils were to pitch their power against Kercheval whenever possible . . . and that after he got off one of those marvelous kicks, he might be found lying cold and limp with the Blue Grass for his pillow.

Kercheval heard it . . . he knew what it was all about . . . and he answered the challenge by one of the greatest exhibitions of football in his splendid career.

When the game ended there stood Kercheval . . . with a record of having excelled himself not only at running, passing, receiving and kicking . . . but with perfect quarterbacking score. They said in the stands after the game that he had not called one signal wrong . . . under the stress of a threat he had out-thought and outplayed them all.

Smiles in SPORTS

Carnegie Tech, led by its brilliant young coach—the youngest mentor of a major eleven in the country—was marching on Michigan State this year for an important battle at East Lansing, Mich.

After the drill, the coach entered the dining room. His meal finished, he asked for pie.

"The coach left orders that no player could be served pie," the waitress told him.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Now that everybody is letting down his shoulder straps and getting confidential with Notre Dame's private affairs, it seems only reasonable that International News Service, having exclusively announced months ago what would take place in connection with Notre Dame football, should today state exactly why it has.

Therefore, we'll start with the statement that Heartly ("Hunk") Anderson was not fired two nights ago or last night or last week. He was, to every practical purpose, fired last spring. Nothing that happened during the lamented season had a great deal to do with it, even to the five defeats and one tie.

These might all have been exalted victories without materially affecting the situation. It has been said that alumni criticism during the season brought on Anderson's denouement but this is the sheerest of idle blather. They may hear their share of alumni criticism at Notre Dame but they're fortunately situated. It's probably an oversight, but they just don't listen.

N. D. Feared Tradition Dying

Briefly, something of apparent unimportance happened during spring practice. I don't know what what it was. Neither does Anderson. It was nothing specific; it even was trivial to the eye. But it convinced the wrong man that the cherished Rockne tradition was too soon being forgotten. In this case, any time is too soon.

The result, eight months later, was the abrupt withdrawal of Anderson and the appointment of Elmer Layden, one of Rockne's celebrated "Horsemen," who is presumed to be the type that will revive this hallowed memory and make it live again.

Originally, the man who was to do this was Noble Kizer of Purdue. But Kizer was Harper's man and Harper, like Anderson, was carried away with the debris when the front office was swept out. The signing of Mal Elward as one of the assistant coaches, with Joe Boland and Tom Conley, shows how far they went with Kizer. Elward was the latter's coach of the ends at Purdue this year.

But as swiftly did the climax come that more than one feature of the original program had to be abandoned. They had intended, for instance, to make their official announcement of the change at the annual football dinner several nights ago but decided to withhold the tidings, rather than make a Banquo's feast of the affair. Probably the last man to think he had a chance a week ago was Layden.

Dorais, Kizer Passed Up

For, at that time, there were two men ahead of him, the second being Charley ("Gus") Dorais, of Detroit. He could have been the first without shocking anybody's sense of the eternal fitness of things. For, if Rockne caught the passes in the old days, it was Dorais who threw them. And in 20 years of coaching up and down the less frequented trails of the nation, he's never been known to have a really bad football team. However, Dorais is all right. He still has a good job and Harper and Anderson have none.

It is strange to see this pair, once so friendly and later so inimical, go out together but, if there's any comfort in the fact, Anderson has the last laugh. He had plenty of notice. Harper had practically none.

As for Kizer, he has no cause to rush to the nearest sorority house and seize a megaphone. He held off renewing with Purdue for reasons that are obvious. Now, through no fault of anybody's or his own, he has to make his peace at Lafayette. This might be pleasanter but it shouldn't be difficult, because he's fortunately situated, too.

He's one of those rarities you often hear about but all too seldom see. He's a football coaches' football coach.

THROUGH AT N. D.

OWNERS TALK UNIFORM BALL, RADIO, TRADES

BY JOHN C HOFFMAN

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—It now appears that the baseball magnates who attend the joint major league meeting here next Thursday will have something else to do besides stand around behind ill-smelling cigars and give out bright statements about the future of the game.

Before they stampede the nearest barroom, the magnates will discuss many issues, probably the most important of which are:

1. A uniform ball. (Each league insists it has the ideal ball. The American league ball is a little livelier. Both balls will continue to be white.)

2. The all-star inter-league game. (Most of the magnates do not like it, especially those in the National league. It's team lost the first one.)

3. The radio. (To make the broadcasters pay, to throw them out of the ball parks or to let it go at that. It's an annual question.)

4. An inter-league series during the season. (The late Bill Veeck liked the idea. Will Harridge, the American league president, doesn't. Nothing will be done about it.)

5. The spitball. (Restore it to anybody who would throw it or let it die when "Red" Faber returns to the farm. It may be restored to a generation of harassed pitchers.)

As is the custom, the magnates will announce the winners of the various championships (already known) and vigorously deny rumore of trades. But this time there will be some trading, if not more of it than has ever been the case at a joint meeting.

For one thing, Connie Mack will decide whether George Earnshaw is going to the White Sox., Boston or New York, or whether he will just remain with the Athletics in the hope that he can be persuaded to pitch some baseball. They may get around to announcing that Mickey Cochrane is going to manage the Detroit Tigers. McGillicudy will take Catcher Hayworth and cash for Mickey, if he can get it.

The magnates also may decide if Wes Ferrell will go to the Browns from Cleveland, if the Cubs will get Gus Suhr for Billy Herman, whether "Chick" Hafey will yet come to Chicago for "Kiki" Cuyler and if the Phillies can be persuaded to part with Jimmy Wilson so he can manage Cincinnati.

TROJANS, HUSKIES CLOSE GRID SEASON

The Trojans were top-heavy favorites to defeat the Huskies whose chief claim to gridiron prominence this year has been a victory over the otherwise undefeated Stanford eleven.

Coach Jimmy Phelan brought his men to town nearly three hours late yesterday, a fact that augured ill for S. C. Stanford put in a belated appearance Nov. 11 and then proceeded to topple the Trojans from their National championship throne.

KITTS NAMED COACH AT RICE INSTITUTE

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 9.—(UP)—Jimmy Kitts today replaced Jack Meagher as head football coach at Rice institute in a major athletic shakeup that has been brewing for months.

Kitts also will retain his position as head basketball coach.

NAVIN ADMITS DEAL PENDS FOR COCHRANE

DETROIT, Dec. 9. — (UP) — "Mickey" Cochrane, Philadelphia catcher, is being sought as manager of the Detroit Tigers, to succeed "Bucky" Harris, Frank Navin, owner of the club, admitted today.

HINT SPLIT IN COLLEGES OVER SCHOLARSHIPS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec 9.—Big business will be performed at the Pacific Coast conference meeting here next week. In fact, a dozen or more tentatively scheduled games hang in the balance.

In addition to the usual round of schedule making, the University of California is expected to have something to say about the present conference rules and structure.

The Bears will ask for an earlier start of fall practice. This year practically all of the serious injuries incurred by Bill Ingram's players occurred during the first four weeks of play.

The open dealing with prep school stars is expected to be aired again. Last year the conference rejected California's plan for "open dealings."

If there is to be a bombshell in this conference confab it will come in the faculty meting.

At the last meeting, held in Spokane, it was learned from reliable sources, a compromise was all that kept U. S. C. from withdrawing from the conference. The compromise resulted after Troy's representative, Prof. H. C. Willett, president of the faculty representatives, told the conference that U. S. C. wasn't ready to agree to a rule on scholarships.

It is said that U. S. C. was given the alternative of accepting a unanimous decision on scholarships awarded to athletes or withdrawal from the conference. Professor Willett said that U. S. C., in that case, would have to withdraw, but he would like a postponement of such decision until he had more time to discuss it with other Trojan officials. This was granted.

Willett told faculty representatives in no uncertain terms at the last meeting that the proposed ruling on scholarships was not acceptable to the president of his school, Rufus von KleinSmid. The Trojan institution has 200 admitted scholarships, most of which go to athletes, and these, the conference was informed, S. C. would not give up.

Outside the conference, there will be considerable scurrying around for games.

Santa Clara, for instance, has several tentative games hanging fire until the conference schedules are completed. One of these games is with the University of Utah. The Broncos are seeking a game with Southern California at Los Angeles, September 29, 1934.

Santa Clara meets Stanford the following week. Their California game is shifted to November. In case the U. S. C. game falls through, the Broncs will open against Stanford. This game comes one week in advance of the California-St. Mary's game, so there will not be a conflict, as in the past.

Michigan State is anxious to play Santa Clara, but the Broncos can do nothing until the rest of their schedule is completed and they can be assured of securing Kezar stadium.

"Gloomy Gus" Henderson, who preceded Howard Jones at U. S. C., wants to bring the University of Tulsa to play Santa Clara here, too.

HANSFORD LUCKY WINNER

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Georgie Hansford, erstwhile Los Angeles high school youngster, received a neat lesson in boxing last night but received a referee's decision in his 10-round bout with Tommy Paul, former featherweight champion, at Hollywood American Legion stadium. The decision was unpopular.

KIPKE OFFERED POST AT YALE: SHAKEUP SURE

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Harry Kipke, who has brought four consecutive Western conference football championships to the University of Michigan, is considering a coaching job in the East, it was learned at the Big Ten meeting today. It was said that Kipke has been approached by Yale and another Eastern school, and that he is giving serious consideration to both offers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(UP) — Yale alumni, dissatisfied with their alma mater's recent football misfortunes, campaigned today for a new deal at New Haven and a complete revision of the Eastern football system.

The Eli Bulldogs will be heard growling loudly tonight during the annual Yale barn party at Montclair, N. J., when some 300 alumni gather to honor the 1933 team. They honor the team every year, "win, lose or draw."

To remedy the topsy-turvy eastern situation, the campaign is to form an Eastern Intercollegiate Football conference, similar to the Midwest's Big Ten. It is understood alumni organizations of other Eastern schools already have been sounded out favorably.

As a preliminary step, a proposal will be offered tonight that Army's football team be stricken from the Yale schedule until the cadets conform to the Eli standards of player eligibility.

This proposal is to show schools that Yale means business in demanding that opponents meet them on an "even break" basis. It is expected to stimulate organization of the conference.

The proposal provides for an eastern "Big Eight," including Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Cornell, Brown, Columbia, Harvard, Princeton and Yale. Navy might be added later.

Concerning the "new deal" at New Haven the United Press learned authoritatively that the Blues have been assured of a general shake-up in the Yale football staff. Some of the well-informed old grads expect Coach Reggie Root to announce his resignation tonight.

GREENLEAF TOTTERS ON U. S. CUE THRONE

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—(UP)—Ralph Greenleaf today tottered on the pocket billiard throne of the world, which he has occupied 13 out of the past 15 years.

The titleholder lost his second straight game of the world's championship pocket billiard tournament to Bennie Allen of Kansas City, 201 to 58 in 23 innings. Greenleaf has won one game while losing two.

The class of competition being displayed in the tournament indicated Greenleaf would have to make a sensational rally if he is to retain his title.

P. C. L. OWNERS MAY STANDARDIZE PRICE

OAKLAND, Dec. 9.—(UP)—The annual meeting of the Pacific Coast league was set for Jan. 8 in a call issued today by Frank Herman, secretary.

The session, to be held here, is expected to discuss standardization of admission prices throughout the circuit and the adoption of the ball now used in the major leagues.

ANDERSON? HE SHOULD HAVE LOST HIS JOB, SAYS SCRIBE

BY HENRY McLEMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—"Hunk" Anderson has been fired, and I'll run the risk of being called undiplomatic and say he should have been. There will be no sob stories from this corner to the effect that the college fathers should not have expected him to fill the mighty Knute's shoes, and that he should be given one more chance.

If this sounds cold-blooded, that's all right, too. Business always has been a cold-blooded proposition, and football coaching, whether at Long Island Veterinary or Notre Dame, is a business. "Hunk" was hired to coach a winning team.

The record tells the story. His team was defeated five times this year. It lost to such schools as Carnegie Tech and Navy. That's not getting the maximum from the stuff at hand. "Hunk" himself would hardly deny that his Notre Dame squad had every physical advantage over the men of Carnegie and Navy.

Why, then, shouldn't he be fired? He didn't produce, did he? For example: You advertise yourself as a taxidermist, so a party engages you to stuff an elephant. If at the end of three years you had only the trunk and one ear stuffed, wouldn't the party have a perfect right to fire you and get another stuffer? True, he might not be able to stuff any faster, but at least he couldn't stuff any slower.

What I say of "Hunk" goes for all the other coaches who have failed. It's my opinion that Yale, if they hired Reggie Root for the same purpose Notre Dame did Anderson, has every right to kick him out. If Root was hired because he is a swell fellow and a good influence on young boys, then all right. But if he was engaged on his ability to send a smooth, smart team out on the field—well, did you see the Yales against Army? Against Princeton?

It's a great relief to get the Notre Dame coaching situation settled. It was getting so a fellow couldn't drive around the corner to get his brass knuckles soldered without being stopped by the elevator starter, the cigar store man, the cop on the corner, and the old fellow who peddles pistachio nuts across the street, for his opinion on what was wrong at Notre Dame, and was it true that David (Whataman) Hutton would succeed Jesse Harper and Professor Moley take Anderson's job?

Now, if the citizenry will just quit discussing and writing about what wine to serve with hamburgers, and whether its Chateu Yquem, 1914, or Hock, 1891, that goes with mashed potatoes, life will be worth living again.

MAY HEAD CUBS

Here is the man who may succeed the late William Veeck as president of the Chicago Cubs. He is William Walker, vice-president of the club who is serving as acting president until a board meeting of the club is held January 3. It is said Walker will be selected at this meeting.

LOU LITTLE IN QUANDARY OVER LION ITINERARY

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(INS)—Of the many problems that beset Lou Little today as he prepared his Columbia Lions for their Rose Bowl encounter with Stanford not the least is the how and when of the trip to Pasadena.

Before mapping out the itinerary for the transcontinental journey, Lou thought it best to consult those who have made the trip before him—those coaches who took other teams to the Rose Bowl.

And the result is a mass of conflicting advice.

Bernie Bierman, who led the Tulane team to Pasadena two years ago, says Little should take his team directly to Los Angeles. "Jock" Sutherland, of Pittsburgh, thinks the Lions should stop off at Tucson, Ariz., for a week as the Panthers did and as Notre Dame always did in its jaunts to the coast.

And this advice doesn't meet with the approval of Steve Owen, coach of the professional Giants, and a third consultant. Steve thinks it will be a mistake to suddenly move a team from a dry climate into a damp one.

Meanwhile, almost every college between here and Pasadena has extended a stopover invitation to the Lions. Tulane forwarded one through the mayor of New Orleans, and others have been extended by Notre Dame, Northwestern, Alabama, Tennessee, and the University of California. Bill McMahan, graduate manager of athletics at California, wants the Lions to jump directly across the continent to Berkeley—and Little is giving the matter serious thought. The climate around San Francisco will be nearer to that of New York than can be obtained anywhere else.

S. A., HARBOR BALL CLUBS MIX SUNDAY

'BIG EIGHT' FORMED BY MOUNTAIN TEAMS

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 9.—(UP)—The "Big Eight" college athletic conference of leading schools of the Rocky Mountain states today sought its place in the athletic sun along with the well known "Big Three" "Big Ten" and "Big Six."

Eight colleges and universities of the Rocky Mountain conference withdrew last night from the conference and immediately set about establishing an intercollegiate athletic organization of their own, leaving only the "little four" to occupy the shell of the old league.

The schools which chose to set themselves apart from the smaller colleges in the mountain country were Denver university, Colorado university, Colorado college, Colorado Agriculture college, Utah university, Utah Agricultural college, Brigham Young university and Wyoming university.

JOE BOLAND TO BE LINE COACH AT NOTRE DAME

It was signed after Layden conferred in secret with the Rev. John F. O'Hara, acting president of Notre Dame.

Father O'Hara said that Joe Boland, a former tackle at Notre Dame and now coach at St. Thomas school, St. Paul, Minn., had signed a contract as line coach.

Tom Conley, an assistant, will be retained, Father O'Hara said.

No changes will be made in the freshman coaching staff for the time being.

Layden indicated that his successor at Duquesne university might be Joe Bach, another former Notre Dame player, and present line coach there. Both Bach and Boland were teammates of Layden.

Father O'Hara declined to discuss the amount of money involved.

"That part is sacred to the persons concerned," he said.

Tustin Hoop Hopes High, Play Downey

Out to regain the exalted position it occupied in 1931 and 1932, Tustin Hi's basketball team formally opens the new season next Tuesday, traveling to Downey for the inaugural.

Coach Bill Cole's Farmers won the Orange County league streamer for two years running, but slumped to fourth place in '33 behind San Juan Capistrano, Orange and Brea-Olinda. Their prospects this winter are regarded as fairly good, despite the loss of such men as Padias and Kiser, regulars, and Dills, McInteer, Arnett and Simington.

Returning lettermen are Dean Francis, forward; Wilson Seacord, center; and Ellsworth Teter, guard. Farmer followers predict regular berths for the trio, with Howard Spangler, and "Chuck" and Bob Forbes favored for the other starting roles. Spangler plays both forward and center. "Chuck" Forbes is a forward, his brother either a guard or forward. The Forbes boys are up from Class B play.

Other promising candidates are George Bronner, Walt Limbaugh, Edgar Pankey, Don Kennedy, Floyd Curl, Nelson Rogers, Ed Bristow, Don Watson, George Riddell and Jeff Richards, the last three former "Bees."

Tustin will enter the annual Huntington Beach Invitational December 14-15-16.

COMMUNITY CHURCH LEAGUE

	W.	L.	Pct.

Costa Mesa Federated	1	1	.500
M. E. South	0	2	.000
Orange Avenue Christian	0	2	.000
St. Peter's Lutheran	0	2	.000

Rallying in an extra three-minute session after a 30-30 deadlock at the end of the fourth quarter, the First Christians, runners-up for the first-half championship, defeated a stubborn United Presbyterian team 34-30, to maintain their clear record in the Community Church basketball league at the Y. M. C. A. last night. Costa Mesa Federated smothered St. Peter's Lutheran quintet, 57-22, in the second game.

Their victory ushered the Christians into a triple tie with the Mormons and First Methodists for first place in the standings.

With Center Kolkhorst setting a deadly pace for the winners, Forward White for the losers, the Christian-Presbyterian contest was one of the most interesting played this season. Although he made 10 points, Kolkhorst was the only Christian who could score a field goal in the first half, and the Presbyterians found themselves in the lead, 14-11, at the beginning of the third period. The Christians began peppering the basket with shots in the second half, however, and managed to tie the count 30-30 before the final whistle sounded. They sank two field goals in the extra session while holding their opponent scoreless.

Earning 18 and 20 points respectively, Center Siegel and Forward Hammerstein were responsible for Costa Mesa's easy triumph over St. Peter's Lutheran. The winners held a 23-10 margin at half-time.

The lineups:

No Place Like This Home

Hooks and Slides

by Bill Braucher

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Old Reggie McNamara was to climb aboard a bicycle for a six-day race at Cleveland, December 6. . . . The following figures show what experience he carries to the boards with him: It is his 97th six-day event. . . . In the previous 96 he covered some 114,000 miles at a pace that doesn't make for longevity . . . that is five times around the world, pedaled on a squirrel-cage track that is a maze of whirling wheels and pounding legs. . . . Despite a face and body scarred by countless falls, the "Iron Man" still can get up on those pedals and sprint with the best of them.

• • •

FOUR TEAMS—FOUR GUYS

Four of the All-America teams already selected agree on only four men — Warburton, Bukler, Crawford and Bernard. The four selectors unanimous on these choices are NEA Service, United Press, Associated Press and New York Evening Post.

The four unanimously chosen represent wide geographical differences. Warburton is the slippery little Southern California quarterback. Crawford is Duke's big right tackle, his school being at Durham, N. C. Johnny Buckler is the slashing halfback from the plains of West Point. Bernard is Michigan's splendid center.

LOTS OF ENDS

The NEA Service team, which was selected by seven coaches, in seven different sections of the country, named Skaldany of Pitt at right end, a choice in which only one other selector concurred. Other right ends named on the first team were Geisler and Smith, while at the left end of the line four men were named: Geisler, of Centenary; Matal, of Columbia; Manske, of Northwestern, and Larson, of Minnesota. Geisler, it seems, can play either end. In all, six ends were named for the two positions.

Rosenberg, the Trojans' big running guard, won three out of four selectors. Schammel, Iowa guard, carried two districts, and Schwammel, Oregon State tackle, did the same. Bill Corbus, Stanford's guard, got the call on three out of four teams.

TWO BACKFIELDS

Enough men for two backfields were named. Besides Warburton and Buckler, who were unanimous, the following men were nominated: Lund, of Minnesota; Franklin, Oregon State; Feathers, Tennessee; Sauer, Nebraska; Danowski, Fordham, and Purvis, Purdue. Two pickers named Sauer. Two named Lund. One vote each was accorded Purvis and Danowski.

The consensus would be a team having Skladany and Geisler, ends; Crawford and Schwammel, tackles; Bernard, center; Rosenberg and Corbus, guards; Warburton, quarterback; Buckler and Lund, halfbacks, and Sauer, fullback. None of the individual selections agreed entirely with the consensus.

• • •

TWO UNNAMED

This is a little song dedicated to two football players who do not stand a great chance of being named All-America this year . . . and I don't know why they're not named either . . . but in the opinions of coaches I have consulted they won't.

They are Mike Sebastian of Pitt and Ralph Kercheval of Kentucky . . . the Sebastian who weaved, bobbed, hand-sprung and catapulted through a frantically grabbing Notre Dame team last year . . . 45 yards of the wildest, most eccentric dancing these eyes have seen after searching many a gridiron.

• • •

TURNING POINT

And that game, by the way, one o fthe greatest upsets in years, seemed to be the turning point for the worse for Notre Dame . . . after that the South Benders, who had come in at odds of 7 to 1, never hit their old-time stride . . . which just shows you what one guy's sudden mad dash can do to a football team.

Again this year, against Nebraska . . . he was like a torrent continually writhing against a levee of well-filled cornhusker jerseys . . . they gave him that leather to lug again and again . . . and when it was all added up, he had a four-yard average to his credit . . . fifteen times carrying the ball.

• • •

KERCHEVAL STANDS UP, TOO

Kercheval . . . for the fine losing struggle he waged against Duke this year . . . with its All-American tackle, Freddy Crawford, standing in front of the line with great arms outstretched . . . before the game, the talk went around that the Blue Devils were to pitch their power against Kercheval whenever possible . . . and that after he got off one of those marvelous kicks, he might be found lying cold and limp with the Blue Grass for his pillow.

Kercheval heard it . . . he knew what it was all about . . . and he answered the challenge by one of the greatest exhibitions of football in his splendid career.

When the game ended there stood Kercheval . . . with a record of having excelled himself not only at running, passing, receiving and kicking . . . but with perfect quarterbacking score. They said in the stands after the game that he had not called one signal wrong . . . under the stress of a threat he had out-thought and outplayed them all.

Smiles in SPORTS

Carnegie Tech, led by its brilliant young coach—the youngest mentor of a major eleven in the country—was marching on Michigan State this year for an important battle at East Lansing, Mich.

After the drill, the coach entered the dining room. His meal finished, he asked for pie.

"The coach left orders that no player could be served pie," the waitress told him.

SPEAKER SAYS FARMERS NOT IN REBELLION

LAGUNA BEACH, Dec. 9.—Former Lieut. Gov. George A. Williams of Nebraska told a joint metng of the Rotary clubs of Laguna Beach and Oceanside, at the latter city, yesterday that the middle west is not in rebellion against the Roosevelt administration and not on strike.

Radicals among the farmers, he said, led members of the so-called Farm Holiday association in disturbances that Williams declared were greatly exaggerated in newspaper reports as to their significance. Many farmers, he said, voluntarily served with peace officers in putting a stop to the blocking of roads and the destruction of crops and dairy products. However, the speaker continued, "the great middle west is far from satisfied with conditions imposed by Washington. In fact, they are profoundly disgusted, and there is not a little feeling of resentment because the farmers believe they are not getting a square deal."

For 25 years, Williams said, the authorities at Washington have been educating the farmers to raise more crops on the same acreage and to fight successfully the plagues that ruin crops. Now, the speaker continued, they are told that they must not produce so much. In speaking of the purchase by the government of six million pigs, as part of the program to curb the production of hogs, Williams charged that most of the meat, which was to have been distributed to the families of unemployed, after the Omaha packers had taken out a part of the fat, was dumped into the river. "We are much confused over that," the speaker declared.

Lew Dick, president of the Oceanside club, called on Lew Gage of that city and Tom Hosmer of Laguna Beach to lead songs. Supervisor Tom Hurley of San Diego county sang several songs, accompanied by Mrs. Sara Erret. Dick introduced President Vincent P. Carroll of the Laguna Beach club. A. C. Peterson, Laguna publisher, was program chairman. A short humorous talk was given by Carl E. Benson and Frank W. Cuprien, Laguna artist, told the dramatic story of how a poet was inspired to write a sonnet after viewing one of his paintings, and how the artist in turn was inspired to compose a song after reading the poem.

SPEAKER SAYS FARMERS NOT IN REBELLION

LAGUNA BEACH, Dec. 9.—Former Lieut. Gov. George A. Williams of Nebraska told a joint meetng of the Rotary clubs of Laguna Beach and Oceanside, at the latter city, yesterday that the middle west is not in rebellion against the Roosevelt administration and not on strike.

Radicals among the farmers, he said, led members of the so-called Farm Holiday association in disturbances that Williams declared were greatly exaggerated in newspaper reports as to their significance. Many farmers, he said, voluntarily served with peace officers in putting a stop to the blocking of roads and the destruction of crops and dairy products. However, the speaker continued, "the great middle west is far from satisfied with conditions imposed by Washington. In fact, they are profoundly disgusted, and there is not a little feeling of resentment because the farmers believe they are not getting a square deal."

For 25 years, Williams said, the authorities at Washington have been educating the farmers to raise more crops on the same acreage and to fight successfully the plagues that ruin crops. Now, the speaker continued, they are told that they must not produce so much. In speaking of the purchase by the government of six million pigs, as part of the program to curb the production of hogs, Williams charged that most of the meat, which was to have been distributed to the families of unemployed, after the Omaha packers had taken out a part of the fat, was dumped into the river. "We are much confused over that," the speaker declared.

Lew Dick, president of the Oceanside club, called on Lew Gage of that city and Tom Hosmer of Laguna Beach to lead songs. Supervisor Tom Hurley of San Diego county sang several songs, accompanied by Mrs. Sara Erret. Dick introduced President Vincent P. Carroll of the Laguna Beach club. A. C. Peterson, Laguna publisher, was program chairman. A short humorous talk was given by Carl E. Benson and Frank W. Cuprien, Laguna artist, told the dramatic story of how a poet was inspired to write a sonnet after viewing one of his paintings, and how the artist in turn was inspired to compose a song after reading the poem.

BOOK REVIEWS

By MARY BURKE KING

Germany Enters the Third Reich, by Calvin B. Hoover, published by the MacMillan Company.

The correct viewpoint of a complicated situation is never simple nor easy to achieve. This truth is brought home clearly in this book of Calvin Hoover's, "Germany Enters the Third Reich."

One is not impressed with this fact so much because this book is complicated as because most other books on the same subject, read previous to it, seem so inadequate in comparison.

Just as "The Economic Life of Soviet Russia" is a firm foundation for an understanding of Russia, this book is a foundation for an understanding of Germany. Not only does it tell of the rise of the National Socialists to power and their program and principles (as closely as they can be gauged from the available material) but is describes the economic situation in Germany since the revolution and the failure of the Social Democrats—in other words the pattern of thought and the economy in Germany which has immeasurably aided Hitler, who is an astute opportunist. In this last phase of German affairs there is a significant study for the people of other nations who by studying the drift of a nation which became ripe for a demagogue may come to recognize similar drifts in their own country. "The mass proportions which the National Socialist movement finally assumed," says Mr. Hoover, "were due primarily to the desperate resolve of the German people that anything was better than to trust longer in a system whose economic philosophy taught that all that could be done in case of an economic depression was to wait until the economic curve rose once more."

A study of the psychology of the National Socialist power in Germany brings one to a conclusion quite at variance with a popular columnist who, visiting in Germany, says that Hitler is leading the German people but is convinced that he will not lead them to war. Certainly the psychological set-up is toward war. Hate is a useful tool for Nazi enterprise.

Not the least interesting phase of the book is a description of Adolph Hitler's methods—a combination of disarming reassurance and threats.

Mr. Hoover believes that the Versailles treaty was only a secondary influence in bringing the third Reich.

Timberline, by Gene Fowler, published by Covici—Friede.

"Timberline" by Gene Fowler, the author of "The Great Mouthpiece," is the story of Fred Bonfils and Harry Tammen, the notorious owners of the Denver Post

Tammen had a curio shop in Denver. He lost his money and going to Chicago looked around for ways and means of making more. He was not very particular about the means. Passing a news stand window he say there a copy of the Declaration of Independence. He bought it and had copies made cheaply. Then he interested the editor of the Chicago Tribune in his Declaration of Independence. That newspaper then had a daily circulation of 84,000. Tammen persuaded the editor to give one copy of the Declaration of Independence to each subscriber. They cost Tammen $2 a thousand, the Tribune paid him $7.50 a thousand and ordered 100,000 documents. With his profits, Tammen set out to find Fred Bonfils, of whom he had been told in the hotel where he was stopping. Bonfils was reputed to have a million dollars and he wanted Bonfils for a partner. He found him and interested him in the Denver Post—a partnership which continued until death separated the two men.

The story of the enterprises of these two is one of those tales which is "stranger than fiction."

The book is reminiscent in style, rather than narrative. Fowler was brought up in the Colorado section. He tells stories of the famous old characters of the section to furnish a background for the Bonfils-Tammen story. Then he tells stories of the famous men and women employed by the Denver Post and contemporary newspapers in Denver. Among them were Eugene Field and Julian Hawthorne. Fowler was himself employed by the Denver Post. The book is filled with really most entertaining anecdotes and it is steeped in newspaper atmosphere.

The editorial offices of the Denver Post were known by the citizens of Denver as "The Bucket of Blood." These publishers were guilty of a transgression painful to newspaper people—they interpolated editorial comment in the news columns of the paper. Therefore, says Mr. Fowler, there was no need for editorials and there were none except the famous "So the People May Know" editorials written by Bonfils from time to time.

Bacchus Behave! by Alma Whitaker, published by Frederick A. Stokes.

If one believes that it is possible to make a silk purse from a sow's ear one also believes in the possibility of making Bacchus behave. People not sufficiently credulous to admit the premise will not care to waste time on the book.

The subject matter is "the lost art of polite drinking." Reviving this "lost art" is rather like searching for the bean soup of boyhood days, soup never tastes as good as that did. And the good old days were never as good as they seem in retrospect as anyone knows who thinks instead of dreams about them.

"Bacchus Behave!" should be popular with the optimists.

No one would claim for "Scarlet Josephine" that it is more than mildly sensational and certainly not great. There is one good character portrayed in the central figure: Miss Ellen Abernathy. In her there is presented a good study of an absorbed genius One of the minor characters in the book, Mrs. Thomas, says, regarding a woman who has written poetry: Lizzie could never sew on a button straight. One must learn to live gracefully first. Life is the first duty, and after that one can take up the embroidery. Ellen Abernathy hadn't learned to live gracefully, by any means, before she took to writing. She was absorbed in the need to write what was inside of her waiting to come out and her absorption in the writing excluded all the niceties and comforts from her life. She was the antithesis of Mrs. Thomas. The novel which Ellen is writing is a means for the release of her inhibitions and the town's reaction to it is amusing. It wasn't devastating to Ellen, as it might have been to another type, for as Eben Abernathy had said once, the Abernathys were not gregarious.

FUGITIVE

Behind these falling curtains of the rain,
Beauty goes by, a phantom on the hill,
A timid fugitive beyond the lane,
In rainy silver,—and so shy and still
That only peering eyes of some hid bird,
Or furry ears that listened by a stone,
Could guess at Something neither seen nor heard,
Finding escape, and faring by, alone.

For eyes like ours, too faint a thing and fleet,
Too lightly running for such ears to hear
The stealthily going of those weight less feet;
No thrilling sight or sound of her comes near,

Only the shining grasses where they lie,
Give hint of silver slippers hasting by.

THE KINGS ARE PASSING DEATHWARD

The kings are passing deathward in the dark
Of days that had been splendid where they went;
Their crowns are captive and their thrones are stark
For all that they have seen disastrous things:
The shattered pomp, the split and shaken throne,
They cannot quite forget the ways of Kings:
Gravely they pass, majestic and alone
With thunder on their brows, their faces set
Toward the eternal night of restless shapes,
They walked in awful splendor, regal yet,

Curse them or taunt, they will not hear or see;

YOUNG ACTORS HAVE LEADS IN WALKER FILM

The author of "Rain" has again written of the little known byplaces—the "narrow corners"—of the earth, where men spin out their lives pretty much as they please. The present story is laid in the Malay Archipelago, on one of the islands of the Dutch East Indies, after opening in Sidney, Australia.

Douglas Fairbanks jr., Patrica Ellis, Ralph Bellamy and Dudley Digges have the leading roles in this all-star production. Miss Ellis, a newcomer to the screen, is not only an exquisite beauty, but a very able actress, who played for years on the New York stage with her father, the musical comedy producer, Alexander Leftwich.

"INVISIBLE MAN" HERE NEXT WEEK

H. G. Wells' fantastic sensation, "The Invisible Man," will be the attraction at the Fox West Coast theater, starting next Friday for three days. The picture follows the run of "I'm No Angel."

With Gloria Stuart, Claud Rains, Dudley Digges and Una O'Conner, the new fright picture is said to be as alluring as "Frankenstein" and is guaranteed to cause creepy tingles of the spine.

GIRL SCOUTS MEET

ORANGE, Dec. 9.—Members of the Owl patrol of Orange Girl Scouts held their latest meeting this week in the home of the first lieutenant, Miss Margaret Gregg, 405 East Maple avenue. A lesson on knot tying was given the girls, who are working on tenderfoot requirements. A taffy pull was held.

Patrol members present were Armysta Sue Davis, Grace Welty, Dorothy Clement, Margaret Bjorkman, Louise Billingsly, Marilyn Corona, Aline Hewlett, Edna Horton and Edith Englert.

"I'M NO ANGEL" HERE

HEROINE

SECRET SERVICE ROLE FOR REX BELL

For those who like rip-roaring action westerns, opening in a whirlwind of excitement and leading up to a starling finale, "The Fugitive," thrilling Rex Bell western, closes tonight at Walker's State theater, is recommended by those who have seen it.

Moving swiftly from a courtroom scene to the state prison, and through a successfully executed jail-break, the story of "The Fugitive" follows a freight train into the western country, where its principal characters are thrown off into the midst of a hot-bed of cattle rustling, and brought into situations which involve secret service operatives and the missing loot from a half-million-dollar mail robbery.

The role of Joe Keyes, the secret service agent, gives Rex Bell an excellent opportunity to display his versatile talents. Equally convincing as the subdued convict in a state's prison, and a picturesque hobo, he naturally comes into his own in the ranch sequences, where once more, to the delight of his numerous fans, he proves his daredevil ability as a hard-riding cowboy.

Pretty Cecilia Parker makes Georgia Parker charming enough to intrigue the interests of any man.

THEATER SHORTS

"The Private Life of Henry VIII" is one of the chief attractions coming to Santa Ana in the near future. At the present time, it is booked at the Broadway.

"Man's Castle", starring Spencer Tracy is on the order of "Power and Glory" in which Tracy starred. It is on the tentative list for Santa Ana at the present time.

The Broadway Theater's Christmas gift to Santa Ana in the way of entertainment will be the new Will Rogers picture, "Mr. Skitch." In it also is Zasu Pitts and Rochelle Hudson, it being the first time the trio has been seen together in a picture.

Although press reports feature Frederic March, Mariam Hopkins, and Gary Cooper, in "Design For Living", soon to appear here, Edward Everett Horton has one of the chief roles. He is the "design for laughter."

Paul Muni's big picture, "The World Changes," the only film the star has made this year is due into the Broadway theater for four days, starting December 17, it was announced today.

Paramount is rushing its new picture, "Alice in Wonderland", so that it will be ready for theater showing before Christmas. Richard Arlen, Gary Cooper, Louise Fazenda, W. C. Fields, Gary Grant, Edward Everett Horton and Polly Moran are starred.

BLOW KILLED REFEREE

WALLACE, Idaho, (UP)—A blow o.. the larynx by one of the boxers in a bout he was refereeing ca.sed the death of George L. Klepinger, 34. The blow caused a general infection that resulted in death.

"I'M NO ANGEL" WITH MAE WEST AT WEST COAST

"I'm No Angel," the Mae West picture, which comes to Santa Ana for a six day showing, opens at the Fox West Coast theater today.

"I'm No Angel," although not a sequel to "She Done Him Wrong," the picture that "made" Mae West, is a film that is just as entertaining.

The picture had its original preview in Santa Ana and played to a packed house at that time. Since then the demand for a return of the film as a regular feature has been the greatest of any picture in the history of the show business here, according to Lester J. Fountain, manager.

Miss West plays the role of a circus performer in the new picture. It is not the dialogue that makes it one of the biggest hits of the year, but the way Miss West says her lines, critics claim.

The program is complete with "Easy Aces" a comedy and a "Strange As It Seems," by Hix. Continuous performance will be made at the theater today only.

MACK DRAMA COMES TO WALKER SCREEN

"What Price Innocence?" the greatly discussed motion picture drama from the pen of Willard Mack, leading American playwright, which is scheduled to open this Wednesday at Walker's State theater, has been included on the list of endorsed motion pictures selected by the National Board of Review and its affiliated Better Films National Council.

Willard Mack, who besides writing the story, also directed the picture and enacted the leading role, is supported by a strong cast including Jean Parker, Minna Gombell, Bryant Washburn, Ben Alexander and Beatrice Banyard.

COOPER, MARCH AND HOPKINS AT BROADWAY SUN.

"Design For Living," the much talked about Ernst Lubitsch production, with four well known stars, comes to the Broadway theater tomorrow for a five day showing.

The picture which broke all records at the Los Angeles Paramount theater for its first week's showing and then broke all records again during its subsequent run, will play here an extra day longer than the usual run of first-of-the-week pictures.

Starring Miriam Hopkins, Frederick March, Gary Cooper and Edward Everett Horton, the story evolves around a girl and two men who form a three cornered friendship with a promise that sex shall not enter their comradship. She is to be a patron of their arts, one a playwright, the other an artist.

For awhile she is able to help them in their work through her friendship, but eventually, sex does enter the plot and from that time to the end, things happen fast and furiously. The screen play is taken from the stage hit by Noel Coward.

BOOK REVIEWS

By MARY BURKE KING

Germany Enters the Third Reich, by Calvin B. Hoover, published by the MacMillan Company.

The correct viewpoint of a complicated situation is never simple nor easy to achieve. This truth is brought home clearly in this book of Calvin Hoover's, "Germany Enters the Third Reich."

One is not impressed with this fact so much because this book is complicated as because most other books on the same subject, read previous to it, seem so inadequate in comparison.

Just as "The Economic Life of Soviet Russia" is a firm foundation for an understanding of Russia, this book is a foundation for an understanding of Germany. Not only does it tell of the rise of the National Socialists to power and their program and principles (as closely as they can be gauged from the available material) but is describes the economic situation in Germany since the revolution and the failure of the Social Democrats—in other words the pattern of thought and the economy in Germany which has immeasurably aided Hitler, who is an astute opportunist. In this last phase of German affairs there is a significant study for the people of other nations who by studying the drift of a nation which became ripe for a demagogue may come to recognize similar drifts in their own country. "The mass proportions which the National Socialist movement finally assumed," says Mr. Hoover, "were due primarily to the desperate resolve of the German people that anything was better than to trust longer in a system whose economic philosophy taught that all that could be done in case of an economic depression was to wait until the economic curve rose once more."

A study of the psychology of the National Socialist power in Germany brings one to a conclusion quite at variance with a popular columnist who, visiting in Germany, says that Hitler is leading the German people but is convinced that he will not lead them to war. Certainly the psychological set-up is toward war. Hate is a useful tool for Nazi enterprise.

Not the least interesting phase of the book is a description of Adolph Hitler's methods—a combination of disarming reassurance and threats.

Mr. Hoover believes that the Versailles treaty was only a secondary influence in bringing the third Reich.

Timberline, by Gene Fowler, published by Covici—Friede.

"Timberline" by Gene Fowler, the author of "The Great Mouthpiece," is the story of Fred Bonfils and Harry Tammen, the notorious owners of the Denver Post

Tammen had a curio shop in Denver. He lost his money and going to Chicago looked around for ways and means of making more. He was not very particular about the means. Passing a news stand window he say there a copy of the Declaration of Independence. He bought it and had copies made cheaply. Then he interested the editor of the Chicago Tribune in his Declaration of Independence. That newspaper then had a daily circulation of 84,000. Tammen persuaded the editor to give one copy of the Declaration of Independence to each subscriber. They cost Tammen $2 a thousand, the Tribune paid him $7.50 a thousand and ordered 100,000 documents. With his profits, Tammen set out to find Fred Bonfils, of whom he had been told in the hotel where he was stopping. Bonfils was reputed to have a million dollars and he wanted Bonfils for a partner. He found him and interested him in the Denver Post—a partnership which continued until death separated the two men.

The story of the enterprises of these two is one of those tales which is "stranger than fiction."

The book is reminiscent in style, rather than narrative. Fowler was brought up in the Colorado section. He tells stories of the famous old characters of the section to furnish a background for the Bonfils-Tammen story. Then he tells stories of the famous men and women employed by the Denver Post and contemporary newspapers in Denver. Among them were Eugene Field and Julian Hawthorne. Fowler was himself employed by the Denver Post. The book is filled with really most entertaining anecdotes and it is steeped in newspaper atmosphere.

The editorial offices of the Denver Post were known by the citizens of Denver as "The Bucket of Blood." These publishers were guilty of a transgression painful to newspaper people—they interpolated editorial comment in the news columns of the paper. Therefore, says Mr. Fowler, there was no need for editorials and there were none except the famous "So the People May Know" editorials written by Bonfils from time to time.

Bacchus Behave! by Alma Whitaker, published by Frederick A. Stokes.

If one believes that it is possible to make a silk purse from a sow's ear one also believes in the possibility of making Bacchus behave. People not sufficiently credulous to admit the premise will not care to waste time on the book.

The subject matter is "the lost art of polite drinking." Reviving this "lost art" is rather like searching for the bean soup of boyhood days, soup never tastes as good as that did. And the good old days were never as good as they seem in retrospect as anyone knows who thinks instead of dreams about them.

"Bacchus Behave!" should be popular with the optimists.

No one would claim for "Scarlet Josephine" that it is more than mildly sensational and certainly not great. There is one good character portrayed in the central figure: Miss Ellen Abernathy. In her there is presented a good study of an absorbed genius One of the minor characters in the book, Mrs. Thomas, says, regarding a woman who has written poetry: Lizzie could never sew on a button straight. One must learn to live gracefully first. Life is the first duty, and after that one can take up the embroidery. Ellen Abernathy hadn't learned to live gracefully, by any means, before she took to writing. She was absorbed in the need to write what was inside of her waiting to come out and her absorption in the writing excluded all the niceties and comforts from her life. She was the antithesis of Mrs. Thomas. The novel which Ellen is writing is a means for the release of her inhibitions and the town's reaction to it is amusing. It wasn't devastating to Ellen, as it might have been to another type, for as Eben Abernathy had said once, the Abernathys were not gregarious.

FUGITIVE

Behind these falling curtains of the rain,
Beauty goes by, a phantom on the hill,
A timid fugitive beyond the lane,
In rainy silver,—and so shy and still
That only peering eyes of some hid bird,
Or furry ears that listened by a stone,
Could guess at Something neither seen nor heard,
Finding escape, and faring by, alone.

For eyes like ours, too faint a thing and fleet,
Too lightly running for such ears to hear
The stealthily going of those weight less feet;
No thrilling sight or sound of her comes near,

Only the shining grasses where they lie,

THE KINGS ARE PASSING DEATHWARD

Of days that had been splendid where they went;
Their crowns are captive and their thrones are stark
For all that they have seen disastrous things:
The shattered pomp, the split and shaken throne,
They cannot quite forget the ways of Kings:
Gravely they pass, majestic and alone
With thunder on their brows, their faces set
Toward the eternal night of restless shapes,
They walked in awful splendor, regal yet,

Curse them or taunt, they will not hear or see;

AL PEARCE AND GANG TO STAGE S. A. BROADCAST

The annual Christmas program and greetings to the entire United States, over a national hook-up of 60 stations from Al Pearce and His Gang, famed radio stars, will be made from the stage of the Broadway theater Saturday December 16, at 1:30 p. m., it was announced today.

The long awaited arrival in Santa Ana of Al Pearce and His Gang in person, will be realized on Friday, December 15, when the attraction is booked into the theater for four shows daily for the two days.

On the screen will be "King For a Night," the new Chester Morris picture, with Helen Twelvetrees, and the stage attraction is in conjunction with the regular screen program, it was announced.

The big Christmas broadcast scheduled, is the biggest thing of its kind Santa Ana has ever had. The network will go out of here over the National Broadcasting company's facilities, and in order that all Santa Ana can see the program, the doors of the theater will open at 12:30 p. m. All persons must be seated and quiet before the program goes on the air. Continuous shows will be staged at the Broadway theater during the stay here of Al Pearce and His Gang.

The big broadcast will last for 30 minutes, after which patrons of the theater will be given their regular afternoon matinee.

YOUNG ACTORS HAVE LEADS IN WALKER FILM

The author of "Rain" has again written of the little known byplaces—the "narrow corners"—of the earth, where men spin out their lives pretty much as they please. The present story is laid in the Malay Archipelago, on one of the islands of the Dutch East Indies, after opening in Sidney, Australia.

Douglas Fairbanks jr., Patrica Ellis, Ralph Bellamy and Dudley Digges have the leading roles in this all-star production. Miss Ellis, a newcomer to the screen, is not only an exquisite beauty, but a very able actress, who played for years on the New York stage with her father, the musical comedy producer, Alexander Leftwich.

"INVISIBLE MAN" HERE NEXT WEEK

H. G. Wells' fantastic sensation, "The Invisible Man," will be the attraction at the Fox West Coast theater, starting next Friday for three days. The picture follows the run of "I'm No Angel."

With Gloria Stuart, Claud Rains, Dudley Digges and Una O'Conner, the new fright picture is said to be as alluring as "Frankenstein" and is guaranteed to cause creepy tingles of the spine.

GIRL SCOUTS MEET

ORANGE, Dec. 9.—Members of the Owl patrol of Orange Girl Scouts held their latest meeting this week in the home of the first lieutenant, Miss Margaret Gregg, 405 East Maple avenue. A lesson on knot tying was given the girls, who are working on tenderfoot requirements A taffy pull was held.

Patrol members present were Armysta Sue Davis, Grace Welty, Dorothy Clement, Margaret Bjorkman, Louise Billingsly, Marilyn Corona, Aline Hewlett, Edna Horton and Edith Englert.

"I'M NO ANGEL" HERE

BEGINS RUN SUNDAY

Gary Cooper, Frederic March and Miriam Hopkins, who form the eternal triangle in "Design for Living," record breaking picture which comes to the Broadway theater Sunday to play five days.

HEROINE

SECRET SERVICE ROLE FOR REX BELL

For those who like rip-roaring action westerns, opening in a whirlwind of excitement and leading up to a starling finale, "The Fugitive," thrilling Rex Bell western, closes tonight at Walker's State theater, is recommended by those who have seen it.

Moving swiftly from a courtroom scene to the state prison, and through a successfully executed jail-break, the story of "The Fugitive" follows a freight train into the western country, where its principal characters are thrown off into the midst of a hot-bed of cattle rustling, and brought into situations which involve secret service operatives and the missing loot from a half-million-dollar mail robbery.

The role of Joe Keyes, the secret service agent, gives Rex Bell an excellent opportunity to display his versatile talents. Equally convincing as the subdued convict in a state's prison, and a picturesque hobo, he naturally comes into his own in the ranch sequences, where once more, to the delight of his numerous fans, he proves his daredevil ability as a hard-riding cowboy.

Pretty Cecilia Parker makes Georgia Parker charming enough to intrigue the interests of any man.

THEATER SHORTS

"The Private Life of Henry VIII" is one of the chief attractions coming to Santa Ana in the near future. At the present time, it is booked at the Broadway.

"Man's Castle", starring Spencer Tracy is on the order of "Power and Glory" in which Tracy starred. It is on the tantative list for Santa Ana at the present time.

The Broadway Theater's Christmas gift to Santa Ana in the way of entertainment will be the new Will Rogers picture, "Mr. Skitch." In it also is Zasu Pitts and Rochelle Hudson, it being the first time the trio has been seen together in a picture.

Although press reports feature Frederic March, Mariam Hopkins, and Gary Cooper, in "Design For Living", soon to appear here, Edward Everett Horton has one of the chief roles. He is the "design for laughter."

Paul Muni's big picture, "The World Changes," the only film the star has made this year is due into the Broadway theater for four days, starting December 17, it was announced today.

Paramount is rushing its new picture, "Alice in Wonderland", so that it will be ready for theater showing before Christmas. Richard Arlen, Gary Cooper, Louise Fazenda, W. C. Fields, Gary Grant, Edward Everett Horton and Polly Moran are starred.

BLOW KILLED REFEREE

WALLACE, Idaho, (UP)—A blow o.. the larynx by one of the boxers in a bout he was refereeing ca.sed the death of George L. Klepinger, 34. The blow caused a general infection that resulted in death.

"I'M NO ANGEL" WITH MAE WEST AT WEST COAST

"I'm No Angel," although not a sequel to "She Done Him Wrong," the picture that "made" Mae West, is a film that is just as entertaining.

The picture had its original preview in Santa Ana and played to a packed house at that time. Since then the demand for a return of the film as a regular feature has been the greatest of any picture in the history of the show business here, according to Lester J. Fountain, manager.

Miss West plays the role of a circus performer in the new picture. It is not the dialogue that makes it one of the biggest hits of the year, but the way Miss West says her lines, critics claim.

The program is complete with "Easy Aces" a comedy and a "Strange As It Seems," by Hix. Continuous performance will be made at the theater today only.

MACK DRAMA COMES TO WALKER SCREEN

"What Price Innocence?" the greatly discussed motion picture drama from the pen of Willard Mack, leading American playwright, which is scheduled to open this Wednesday at Walker's State theater, has been included on the list of endorsed motion pictures selected by the National Board of Review and its affiliated Better Films National Council.

Willard Mack, who besides writing the story, also directed the picture and enacted the leading role, is supported by a strong cast including Jean Parker, Minna Gombell, Bryant Washburn, Ben Alexander and Beatrice Banyard.

COOPER, MARCH AND HOPKINS AT BROADWAY SUN.

"Design For Living," the much talked about Ernst Lubitsch production, with four well known stars, comes to the Broadway theater tomorrow for a five day showing.

The picture which broke all records at the Los Angeles Paramount theater for its first week's showing and then broke all records again during its subsequent run, will play here an extra day longer than the usual run of first-of-the-week pictures.

Starring Miriam Hopkins, Frederick March, Gary Cooper and Edward Everett Horton, the story evolves around a girl and two men who form a three cornered friendship with a promise that sex shall not enter their comradship. She is to be a patron of their arts, one a playwright, the other an artist.

For awhile she is able to help them in their work through her friendship, but eventually, sex does enter the plot and from that time to the end, things happen fast and furiously. The screen play is taken from the stage hit by Noel Coward.

Aside from the feature, the program also shows "Around the Calendar," a sport reel; a musicale treat, Harry Wonan author of songs in "42nd Street" and "Gold Diggers of 1933" and a news reel.

Surprise Gathering Follows Birthday Dinner

Starting with a little dinner party, a merry evening in the Lloyd L. Stevens home, 1309 Maple street, this week served as a delightful observance of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Ella Faupel.

Seated around the table were Mr and Mrs. Stevens, their little daughter, Miss Betty Jeanne Stevens, Mrs. Ethel Hutchison, Miss Opal Brownlow and Mrs. Faupel and her daughter, Doris Lorraine. Pink sweet peas in a silver bowl and tapers in pretty candlesticks were appointments used. Individual birthday cakes topped with lighted candles were brought in by Betty Jeanne.

Before the evening was very far advanced other friends of the birthday celebrant had arrived to join with the dinner group in the observance, much to the surprise of Mrs. Faupel. The time was spent in embroidering designs on coat hangers for the honoree. She was presented with many gifts in addition to packages received earlier in the evening at the dinner table. Miss Emma Williams gave readings during the evening.

Trays brightened with pretty nutcups were used in serving sandwiches, coffee and individual cakes adorned with blue forget-me-nots. Garden flowers arranged throughout the rooms served as decorations.

Those present, other than the hostess group, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Hutchison and Miss Brownlow, were Mrs Faupel, Doris Lorraine Faupel, Mrs. Lois Morrison, Miss Emma Williams, Mrs. Ernest Fox, Miss Margaret Bowen, Mrs. Henry Witherow, Mrs. Frank Boyd, Mrs. Elmer Uiseth, Mrs. Noble Watson, Miss Marguerite Fox and little Miss Betty Jeanne Stevens.

Kitchen Shower Given For Engaged Couple

Miss Louise Markwalder and Orville Bachman, whose marriage is to take place on December 17, were showered with a variety of kitchen accessories this week at a shower given in the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Jacobs, 119 Occidental street.

Bunco was played during the evening, and prizes were won by Mrs. Ernest Bachman and Mrs. C. C. Markwood, who scored high and low for women players, and by Mr. Bachman and Everett McKinney, scoring high and low for men. Miss Markwalder and Mr. Bachman were presented with the many pretty packages brought by the guests.

Appropriate refreshments were served at small tables. Poinsettias arranged throughout the rooms of the home served as decorations.

Those present, other than Miss Markwalder and Mr. Bachman, and the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs, were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bachman, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. William Humphrey, the Misses Alta Hunter, La Dora Catherman, Vesta Jacobs, Everett McKinney all of Santa Ana; Brehn Thompson of Los Angeles and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Markwood, Anaheim.

HERODOTUS is known as "The Father of History." MARY SHELLEY created the character Frankenstein in 1818. The Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock DECEMBER 21 1620.

Kiwanis Entertainment Committee Welcomed At Dinner Event

With the drawing to a close of Dr. Harry G. Huffman's presidency of Kiwanis club and the conclusion of the year's general social program advanced by his entertainment committee, Dr. and Mrs. Huffman entertained this week at an unusually enjoyable dinner party in their home, 2340 Riverside Drive.

Invited to share the function with the men of the committee, were their wives, who have been unofficial members of the group throughout the year, in accordance with a plan launched two years ago. Guests found the Huffman home ablaze with Christmas cheer, expressed in the flaring red candles, the great baskets of poinsettias and the festooned cotoneaster sprays.

Perhaps the most charming effect of all was attained in the dining room where the dinner was served from buffet and table eloquent of the Yuletide. Centering the table was a miniature scene of the Nativity, with tiny figures gathering in adoration at the manger of Bethlehem.

Inauguration Ball

Following the dinner hour, the small tables at which the guests dined in friendly foursomes, were put aside for a later bridge interval, and time was spent discussing plans for the big event of Kiwanis year, the inaugural dinner and ball of Thursday night, December 14. This will be in Ebell clubhouse with dinner at 7 o'clock. Dr. Huffman will then relinquish the presidential gavel to Theo A. Winbigler who will serve the club through 1934 and who, with his officers, will be duly installed.

"Kiwanettes" will take prominent part in social features of the evening, which will include dancing and other entertainment. A Christmas tree will be one of the chief features of interest, and the committee has planned gifts for all those attending, an innovation in Kawanis affairs, but made possible this year because of the fact that there was no spring formal party as in previous years.

Following detailed discussion of plans, the card tables were again called into play and bridge was introduced. Dr. and Mrs. Huffman awarded prizes to couples making special scores, and chose the Christmas colors, with gay scarlet and silver tissues and ribbons for beautiful green Camark pottery. The gifts went to Mr. and Mrs. Otto Haan, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Newcomb jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Loren Moore.

Kiwanians and Kiwanettes enjoying the hospitality of their presiding officer and his wife, were Orlyn Robertson, entertainment chairman, and Mrs. Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. Hiram M. Currey, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Newcomb jr., Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crowell jr., Mrs. and Mrs. Loren Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Diehl, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Haan.

High School Girls Are Interested in New Service Club

Some time ago a group of Santa Ana High school girls began the forming of a girls' service club. This action resulted in the gathering together on Wednesday evening of the girls who hold school offices to found what will now be known as the Alpha Service club of Santa Ana High school.

The home of Miss Ruth Warner, 1116 South Van Ness avenue, was opened to the girls for this first meeting of the society. This seemed appropriate since it was through Miss Warner's effort that the club was started. She was honored by being elected president.

The evening was spent in discussion and adoption of a constitution which was formulated by the Misses Edna Wilson, Mildred Kemper and Gertrude Vaughne. Miss Mary Schofield, girls' faculty advisor, used the evening to get acquainted with the members.

The emblem of this service club will be sweaters of the school colors, to be worn by the members.

Mrs. Alumbaugh was formerly Mrs. Ivy Louderback, who had made her home here in Santa Ana for several years before going to Inglewood to live about two years ago.

Present for the quiet ceremony at which she and Mr. Alumbaugh were united was the latter's aunt, Mrs. Alice Archer of Vancouver, Wash., who had been visiting here for the past few weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Alumbaugh then accompanied Mrs. Archer to Los Angeles, where she was to make a short visit with relatives before returning to her home in the north.

County Women's Clubs Hold Board Meeting In Costa Mesa

With Costa Mesa Friday Afternoon club as hostess organization, the Orange County federation of Women's Clubs held an interesting board meeting Thursday in the Women's clubhouse of the Mesa, with Mrs. Casey F. Bonebrake of Orange, county federation president, in the chair.

The meeting convened at 10 a. m. and immediately after the routine business, were reports by county chairmen. Mrs. H. W. Saulsbery, motion picture chairman, touched upon the present situation in that industry, commenting on the presidential appointment of Dr. Lowell to the radio code committee. She recommended the film of "Little Women" very highly.

Mrs. R. C. Harris, chairman of junior membership, reported the formation of two new groups within the past two months, Laguna Beach with 45 members, and Anaheim Junior Ebell with 45 members. She also told of the successful reciprocity meeting held in Santa Ana Ebell clubhouse with Junior and Girls' Ebell societies as hostesses to the county juniors.

Mrs. James McCracken, literature and art, told of plans for another day at Laguna Beach studios, following the success of the recent all day visit. Other reports were given by Mrs. C. C. Violett, public health; Mrs. G. B. Dunham, institutional relations; Mrs. S. W. Windle, law observance, and Mrs. A. L. Schellhaus, child welfare.

Mrs. Walter Ross paid tribute to the late Mrs. Nellie Terry of Anaheim, who prior to her death had been a tireless worker in the federation.

An interlude in the morning's business program was provided by Miss Fonda Roberts of Fullerton, who presented Mrs. Y. W. Ramsey and Mrs. Floyd Annin. Mrs. Annin played Christmas carols very ecftly as Mrs. Ramsey read a beautiful Christmas message. This interval closed with a group of songs by Mrs. Ross, with Mrs. Custer as accompanist.

Miss Irene Carlson of the State Tuberculosis association, made a plea for the sale of Christmas seals, explaining that malnutrition of children during prevailing economic conditions, made it necessary to continue the war against tuberculosis with undiminshed vigor.

Mrs. C. C. Violett introduced the morning speaker, Dr. Edward L. Russell of the county health department, who talked on infant mortality. One of his statements was that mortality of child birth was slightly lower in Orange county than in California as a whole, and that the state was less than that of the United States. However child birth mortality in the United States is very high, he declared.

During the luncheon, served at tables bright with red berries, and which added to the already enviable reputation of the culinary prowess of the Costa Mesa women, Mrs. Daughenbaugh, hostess club president, gave the welcome and Mrs. F. C. Rowland responded. Music during the luncheon was graciously furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew G. Mandery. Mr. Mandery sang a group of old favorite songs to his wife's accompaniment. J. Frank Burke of Santa Ana urged support of the harbor bonds at the coming election.

The afternoon session was given over to an address by Capt. Don Wilkie of the secret service, a noted authority on crime prevention. His pertinent comments and suggestions were enthusiastically received, and though his talk bristled with statistics they were so vitally interesting no one realized how many facts and figures had been given and at the end of his lecture he was bombarded with questions.

Seated around the table were Mr and Mrs. Stevens, their little daughter, Miss Betty Jeanne Stevens, Mrs. Ethel Hutchison, Miss Opal Brownlow and Mrs. Faupel and her daughter, Doris Lorraine. Pink sweet peas in a silver bowl and tapers in pretty candlesticks were appointments used. Individual birthday cakes topped with lighted candles were brought in by Betty Jeanne.

Before the evening was very far advanced other friends of the birthday celebrant had arrived to join with the dinner group in the observance, much to the surprise of Mrs. Faupel. The time was spent in embroidering designs on coat hangers for the honoree. She was presented with many gifts in addition to packages received earlier in the evening at the dinner table. Miss Emma Williams gave readings during the evening.

Trays brightened with pretty nutcups were used in serving sandwiches, coffee and individual cakes adorned with blue forget-me-nots. Garden flowers arranged throughout the rooms served as decorations.

Kiwanis Entertainment Committee Welcomed At Dinner Event

With the drawing to a close of Dr. Harry G. Huffman's presidency of Kiwanis club and the conclusion of the year's general social program advanced by his entertainment committee, Dr. and Mrs. Huffman entertained this week at an unusually enjoyable dinner party in their home, 2340 Riverside Drive.

Invited to share the function with the men of the committee, were their wives, who have been unofficial members of the group throughout the year, in accordance with a plan launched two years ago. Guests found the Huffman home ablaze with Christmas cheer, expressed in the flaring red candles, the great baskets of poinsettias and the festooned cotoneaster sprays.

Perhaps the most charming effect of all was attained in the dining room where the dinner was served from buffet and table eloquent of the Yuletide, Centering the table was a miniature scene of the Nativity, with tiny figures gathering in adoration at the manger of Bethlehem.

Inauguration Ball

Following the dinner hour, the small tables at which the guests dined in friendly foursomes, were put aside for a later bridge interval, and time was spent discussing plans for the big event of Kiwanis year, the inaugural dinner and ball of Thursday night, December 14. This will be in Ebell clubhouse with dinner at 7 o'clock. Dr. Huffman will then relinquish the presidential gavel to Theo A. Winbigler who will serve the club through 1934 and who, with his officers, will be duly installed.

"Kiwanettes" will take prominent part in social features of the evening, which will include dancing and other entertainment. A Christmas tree will be one of the chief features of interest, and the committee has planned gifts for all those attending, an innovation in Kawanis affairs, but made possible this year because of the fact that there was no spring formal party as in previous years.

Following detailed discussion of plans, the card tables were again called into play and bridge was introduced. Dr. and Mrs. Huffman awarded prizes to couples making special scores, and chose the Christmas colors, with gay scarlet and silver tissues and ribbons for beautiful green Camark pottery. The gifts went to Mr. and Mrs. Otto Haan, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Newcomb jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Loren Moore.

Kiwanians and Kiwanettes enjoying the hospitality of their presiding officer and his wife, were Orlyn Robertson, entertainment chairman, and Mrs. Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. Hiram M. Currey, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Newcomb jr., Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crowell jr., Mrs. and Mrs. Loren Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Diehl, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Haan.

High School Girls Are Interested in New Service Club

Some time ago a group of Santa Ana High school girls began the forming of a girls' service club. This action resulted in the gathering together on Wednesday evening of the girls who hold school offices to found what will now be known as the Alpha Service club of Santa Ana High school.

The home of Miss Ruth Warner, 1116 South Van Ness avenue, was opened to the girls for this first meeting of the society. This seemed appropriate since it was through Miss Warner's effort that the club was started. She was honored by being elected president.

The evening was spent in discussion and adoption of a constitution which was formulated by the Misses Edna Wilson, Mildred Kemper and Gertrude Vaughne. Miss Mary Schofield, girls' faculty advisor, used the evening to get acquainted with the members.

The emblem of this service club will be sweaters of the school colors, to be worn by the members.

With Costa Mesa Friday Afternoon club as hostess organization, the Orange County federation of Women's Clubs held an interesting board meeting Thursday in the Women's clubhouse of the Mesa, with Mrs. Casey F. Bonebrake of Orange, county federation president, in the chair.

The meeting convened at 10 a. m. and immediately after the routine business, were reports by county chairmen. Mrs. H. W. Saulsbery, motion picture chairman, touched upon the present situation in that industry, commenting on the presidential appointment of Dr. Lowell to the radio code committee. She recommended the film of "Little Women" very highly.

Mrs. R. C. Harris, chairman of junior membership, reported the formation of two new groups within the past two months, Laguna Beach with 45 members, and Anaheim Junior Ebell with 45 members. She also told of the successful reciprocity meeting held in Santa Ana Ebell clubhouse with Junior and Girls' Ebell societies as hostesses to the county juniors.

Mrs. James McCracken, literature and art, told of plans for another day at Laguna Beach studios, following the success of the recent all day visit. Other reports were given by Mrs. C. C. Violett, public health; Mrs. G. B. Dunham, institutional relations; Mrs. S. W. Windle, law observance, and Mrs. A. L. Schellhaus, child welfare.

Mrs. Walter Ross paid tribute to the late Mrs. Nellie Terry of Anaheim, who prior to her death had been a tireless worker in the federation.

An interlude in the morning's business program was provided by Miss Fonda Roberts of Fullerton, who presented Mrs. Y. W. Ramsey and Mrs. Floyd Annin. Mrs. Annin played Christmas carols very softly as Mrs. Ramsey read a beautiful Christmas message. This interval closed with a group of songs by Mrs. Ross, with Mrs. Custer as accompanist.

Miss Irene Carlson of the State Tuberculosis association, made a plea for the sale of Christmas seals, explaining that mainutrition of children during prevailing economic conditions, made it necessary to continue the war against tuberculosis with undiminished vigor.

Mrs. C. C. Violett introduced the morning speaker, Dr. Edward L. Russell of the county health department, who talked on infant mortality. One of his statements was that mortality of child birth was slightly lower in Orange county than in California as a whole, and that the state was less than that of the United States. However child birth mortality in the United States is very high, he declared.

During the luncheon, served at tables bright with red berries, and which added to the already enviable reputation of the culinary prowess of the Costa Mesa women, Mrs. Daughenbaugh, hostess club president, gave the welcome and Mrs. F. C. Rowland responded. Music during the luncheon was graciously furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew G. Mandery. Mr. Mandery sang a group of old favorite songs to his wife's accompaniment. J. Frank Burke of Santa Ana urged support of the harbor bonds at the coming election.

The afternoon session was given over to an address by Capt. Don Wilkie of the secret service, a noted authority on crime prevention. His pertinent comments and suggestions were enthusiastically received, and though his talk bristled with statistics they were so vitally interesting no one realized how many facts and figures had been given and at the end of his lecture he was bombarded with questions.

Christmas Arrives for Household Economics Section of Ebell

In company with other section groups og Ebell society, the Fourth Household Economics section has set aside the December meeting for a Christmas observance. Yesterday it was the privilege of members to be entertained at 1 o'clock luncheon in the clubhouse by Mrs. John Knox, Mrs. S. J. Hales and Mrs. A. Thorndike.

Enjoyment of a holiday menu was followed by distribution of gifts, with Mrs. Jones playing Santa Claus, and each one present receiving a lovely gift prepared by some one member of the group. As program feature, Eleanor Young Elliott gave a group of readings ranging from serious to gay, and all on a Christmas theme.

Mesdames Thorndike, Knox and Hales had as their guests, Mrs. S. A. Jones, Mrs. Walter Hiskey, Mrs. Oliver H. Umberham, Mrs. Robert Coulter, Miss Ida Nay, Mrs. J. F. Richards, Mrs. C. A. ANN MEREDITH'S MIXING BOWL

EAT AND GROW SLIM

Dinner

1 minute steak
2 Tbsps. pan gravy
4 Tbsps mashed carrot
3 Tbsps. beet greens
Orange Salad
Calory total, 500.

Allow a quarter-pound of round steak for each minute steak, pound well, and pan-fry on a very hot pan, lightly rubbed with butter. The title "minute" steak originated in the short time required to cook the steak.

Nearly always one has a cupful of cream of tomato soup left over, and nearly always it used to sit in my refrigerator until it lapsed into innocuous deseutude. But that doesn't happen any more. These are some of the ways in which I use up such odds'n' ends.

Heat the cup of soup, thicken slightly with cornstarch and add 1-2 cup of grated cheese. Pour over boiled cauliflower and brown in a hot oven.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Orange Marmalade

1 lemon
1 1-2 pints water to each pound of fruit
1 1-2 pound sugar to each pound of fruit and liquid.

—Contributed Recipe

Weigh the fruit after thus preparing, and to each pound add 3 cups (measuring cups, please) of water.

Boil water and fruit 30 minutes from the time boiling starts, then cover and let stand over night.

Weigh fruit and liquid and to each pound add 1 1-2 pounds of sugar, set over the fire, bring to a rolling boil, and from then on boil 30 minutes.

* * *

This is a tried and tested recipe, so use it without fear of failure, but please take note: you must follow directions as to boiling time, weighing, etc., to the dot. There can be no guessing in the making of a marmalade which will jelly perfectly.

Following their sewing and business meeting Wednesday afternoon in the church, members of the First Baptist Woman's society presided as hostesses at a dinner in honor of the W. W. G., girls' missionary circle of the church.

The dinner was a family affair, with all present contributing dishes to the menu. ANN MEREDITH'S MIXING BOWL

EAT AND GROW SLIM

Dinner

1 minute steak
2 Tbsps. pan gravy
4 Tbsps mashed carrot
3 Tbsps. beet greens
Orange Salad
Clear tea, no sugar.
Calory total, 500.

Allow a quarter-pound of round steak for each minute steak, pound well, and pan-fry on a very hot pan, lightly rubbed with butter. The title "minute" steak originated in the short time required to cook the steak.

* * *

Nearly always one has a cupful of cream of tomato soup left over, and nearly always it used to sit in my refrigerator until it lapsed into innocuous deseutude. But that doesn't happen any more. These are some of the ways in which I use up such odds'n' ends.

Heat the cup of soup, thicken slightly with cornstarch and add 1-2 cup of grated cheese. Pour over boiled cauliflower and brown in a hot oven.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Orange Marmalade

3 oranges
1 lemon
1 1-2 pints water to each pound of fruit
1 1-2 pound sugar to each pound of fruit and liquid.

—Contributed Recipe

Remove seeds from the fruit and run sliced fruit through the food chopper.

Weigh the fruit after thus preparing, and to each pound add 3 cups (measuring cups, please) of water.

Boil water and fruit 30 minutes from the time boiling starts, then cover and let stand over night.

Weigh fruit and liquid and to each pound add 1 1-2 pounds of sugar, set over the fire, bring to a rolling boil, and from then on boil 30 minutes.

* * *

This is a tried and tested recipe, so use it without fear of failure, but please take note: you must follow directions as to boiling time, weighing, etc., to the dot. There can be no guessing in the making of a marmalade which will jelly perfectly.

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Paul In Caesarea

Text: Acts 24:10-23

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 10.

• • •

Editor of The Congregationalist

Paul was in Caesarea, a city on the Mediterranean coast not far from Jerusalem, founded in honor of the Caesars. He had been brought there to appear before the governor, Felix, following his arrest in Jerusalem to which he had returned for the last time from his third missionary journey.

It might be remembered that Paul had returned from this third missionary journey and the affecting farewell, at Miletus, to the elders of the church in Asia, assuring them that he was going to Jerusalem with the conviction that bonds and afflictions were awaiting him there, but with the determination that nothing should deter him from the fulfillment of his ministry as a faithful soldier of Jesus Christ.

The premonitions that Paul had had were quickly fulfilled. Some Asiatic Jews, who had also come to Jerusalem from the region where Paul had been carrying on his missionary activities, had found Paul in the temple and had raised a great outcry against him, charging that he had assailed their religion, rejecting the teaching of Moses and defiling the temple.

In the uproar, Paul probably would have been killed by the mob, but he was rescued by a Roman captain, who, on Paul's declaration of his Roman citizenship, gave him permission to speak to the people.

• • •

It was on this occasion that Paul gave his defense and the fine account of his life contained in Acts: 22. But when Paul spoke of his ministry to the Gentiles the uproar broke out with renewed violence, and to save Paul the captain had him brought into the castle.

Paul later was freed from his bonds and the chief priests and council were commanded to appear, while Paul was brought before them. Here he made a further defense of himself, but dissensions arose again, this time between the Sadducees and the Pharisees.

The Roman captain, fearing that Paul would be pulled to pieces between them, commanded the soldiers to take him by force and bring him back into the castle.

Meanwhile a band of Paul's foes conspired under oath declaring that they would neither eat nor drink until they had killed him, but the Roman captain, hearing of this conspiracy, provided a company of soldiers and horsemen to escort Paul safely to Caesarea for appearance before Felix, the Roman governor.

In our lesson Paul has come before the governor and has been permitted to speak for himself. It is a dignified statement of Paul's religious convictions and purposes, and Felix was so well impressed that he decided to postpone further consideration of the cast until he could have more exact knowledge.

Possibly Felix was anticipating some disposition of the case that would turn to his own advantage, but when Paul was again called before Felix, who sat on the bench with his wife Drusilla, the Roman governor discovered the quality of the prisoner with whom he had to deal.

We have the dramatic story of how the governor trembled as this humble minister of Christ stood before him and reasoned "of temperance, righteousness and judgment to come." It was on this occasion that Felix gave the excuse that innumerable others have given under the challenge of conscience, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee."

What a contrast between the decisiveness and conviction of the lowly Christian tentmaker, and the weakness and indecision of the proud man of affairs! Truly, as Paul said elsewhere, "God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the mighty."

The FALL of JERICHO

WHEN the King of Jericho saw the Israelites swarming across the Jordan and gathering in fighting array beneath his walls, he ordered the gates of the city barred and his soldiers stood by the battlements, spears in hand.

Meanwhile Joshua was praying. And as he knelt, a man with drawn sword stood suddenly before him. "Are you for us, or for Jericho?" Joshua demanded.

The man made answer: "I am a captain of the host of the Lord come to help you. Prepare the ark of the Covenant. Let it be borne around the walls of Jericho once a day for six days. But on the seventh day let it encompass the city seven times, and then shout with a great shout."

So, in accordance with the commands of the Lord's messenger the Israelites marched about the walls of the city once a day for six days, while the amazed inhabitants peered out, awaiting the attack.

On the seventh day the hosts of Israel marched about Jericho, not once, but seven times, and when the priests had blown a blast upon the trumpets of rams' horns, all the people shouted together with a great shout. And, behold, the walls of Jericho fell into ruins upon the plain.

Then Joshua and his followers rushed in to sack and burn the city to the ground, sparing only a certain house marked by the presence of a scarlet rope.

Paul In Caesarea

Text: Acts 24:10-23

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 10.

* * *

Editor of The Congregationalist

Paul was in Caesarea, a city on the Mediterranean coast not far from Jerusalem, founded in honor of the Caesars. He had been brought there to appear before the governor, Felix, following his arrest in Jerusalem to which he had returned for the last time from his third missionary journey.

It might be remembered that Paul had returned from this third missionary journey and the affecting farewell, at Miletus, to the elders of the church in Asia, assuring them that he was going to Jerusalem with the conviction that bonds and afflictions were awaiting him there, but with the determination that nothing should deter him from the fulfillment of his ministry as a faithful soldier of Jesus Christ.

The premonitions that Paul had had were quickly fulfilled. Some Asiatic Jews, who had also come to Jerusalem from the region where Paul had been carrying on his missionary activities, had found Paul in the temple and had raised a great outcry against him, charging that he had assailed their religion, rejecting the teaching of Moses and defiling the temple.

In the uproar, Paul probably would have been killed by the mob, but he was rescued by a Roman captain, who, on Paul's declaration of his Roman citizenship, gave him permission to speak to the people.

* * *

It was on this occasion that Paul gave his defense and the fine account of his life contained in Acts: 22. But when Paul spoke of his ministry to the Gentiles the uproar broke out with renewed violence, and to save Paul the captain had him brought into the castle.

Paul later was freed from his bonds and the chief priests and council were commanded to appear, while Paul was brought before them. Here he made a further defense of himself, but dissensions arose again, this time between the Sadducees and the Pharisees.

The Roman captain, fearing that Paul would be pulled to pieces between them, commanded the soldiers to take him by force and bring him back into the castle.

Meanwhile a band of Paul's foes conspired under oath declaring that they would neither eat nor drink until they had killed him, but the Roman captain, hearing of this conspiracy, provided a company of soldiers and horsemen to escort Paul safely to Caesarea for appearance before Felix, the Roman governor.

* * *

In our lesson Paul has come before the governor and has been permitted to speak for himself. It is a dignified statement of Paul's religious convictions and purposes, and Felix was so well impressed that he decided to postpone further consideration of the cast until he could have more exact knowledge.

Possibly Felix was anticipating some disposition of the case that would turn to his own advantage, but when Paul was again called before Felix, who sat on the bench with his wife Drusilla, the Roman governor discovered the quality of the prisoner with whom he had to deal.

We have the dramatic story of how the governor trembled as this humble minister of Christ stood before him and reasoned "of temperance, righteousness and judgment to come." It was on this occasion that Felix gave the excuse that innumerable others have given under the challenge of conscience, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee."

What a contrast between the decisiveness and conviction of the lowly Christian tentmaker, and the weakness and indecision of the proud man of affairs! Truly, as Paul said elsewhere, "God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the mighty."

The FALL of JERICHO

WHEN the King of Jericho saw the Israelites swarming across the Jordan and gathering in fighting array beneath his walls, he ordered the gates of the city barred, and his soldiers stood by the battlements, spears in hand.

Meanwhile Joshua was praying. And as he knelt, a man with drawn sword stood suddenly before him. "Are you for us, or for Jericho?" Joshua demanded.

The man made answer: "I am a captain of the host of the Lord come to help you. Prepare the ark of the Covenant. Let it be borne around the walls of Jericho once a day for six days. But on the seventh day let it encompass the city seven times, and then shout with a great shout."

So, in accordance with the commands of the Lord's messenger, the Israelites marched about the walls of the city once a day for six days, while the amazed inhabitants peered out, awaiting the attack.

On the seventh day the hosts of Israel marched about Jericho, not once, but seven times, and when the priests had blown a blast upon the trumpets of rams' horns, all the people shouted together with a great shout. And, behold, the walls of Jericho fell into ruins upon the plain.

Then Joshua and his followers rushed in to sack and burn the city to the ground, sparing only a certain house marked by the presence of a scarlet rope.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KING

"With dolls I've always loved to play. Why, I could coddle them all day. When I have finished painting, I will rock them, one by one."

She found a can of paint. 'Twas pink. "This will be fine for cheeks, I think," exclaimed the happy little girl. Just then two elves walked in.

"We came to help you if we can," cried out one funny looking man. "I need no help, but you can watch," said Dotty, with a grin.

'Course, in the meantime, Santa was a very busy man because he had to find some other work the Tinymites could do.

He joined the bunch and Windy cried, "Some little airplanes I have spied. I'll gladly try each one out, if you think that will help you.

"An aviator bold am I. I've often sailed out through the sky and battled with the wild winds. That's why Windy is my name.

"Of course, I know your planes are toys, just means for little girls and boys, but if they do not work just right 'twill be an awful shame."

• • •

"Hurrah for you," cried Santa. "Gee you'll be a great big help to me. I'll send two little elves with you and you can go to work.

"Wind up the planes and run them 'round. Whatever's wrong will then be found. The little elves will help you, lad, and do not let them shirk."

Soon Windy met the little elves. They said, "We're pretty good, ourselves, at fixing planes, so come along. The work will be like play.

"Some painting we will have to do. We'll color planes in every hue. It will not take us very long, if at our task we stay."

MAN IN COURT ON STATUTORY COUNT

Leland Bud Hamlin, accused of a statutory offense, appeared yesterday before Superior Judge James L. Allen and pleaded not guilty to the charge. He waived the reading of the information against him and had his trial set January 8 with the understanding that it probably would be reset for December 20.

Hamlin is accused of having attacked Thelma Whitsell Garland on the night of November 26, last.

Floys Auton waived the reading of an information charging him with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor, and pleaded guilty to the charge. He filed an application for probation, through his attorney John Colwell, and hearing on the application was set for next Friday. Colwell asked the court to reduce Auton's bail from $1000 to $500 but the request was denied and Auton was returned to jail.

JOHN REUTHER MADE MANAGER OF MEAT PLANT

ANAHEIM, Dec. 9.—John Reuther, well known Anaheim man, has been engaged as manager of the Southern Meat company plant of Anaheim, it was announced today by C. S. Chapman, president of the Orange county concern.

Reuther owned and operated the Anaheim Beef company plant in Anaheim for 14 years and is well known in the meat packing business. He had not been connected with the meat business in this vicinity for the past six years.

He succeeds Harry A. Scott, former manager of the plant, who has gone back to Los Angeles. Reuther's long experience in the meat industry and his host of friends is expected to insure the continued prosperity of the organization. He will welcome any of his old friends at the plant of the Southern Meat company.

The completely rebuilt and modernized plant is operated under federal supervision, with two United States government inspectors in attendance. The plant is fully equipped in every way to supply any demand of the wholesale meat trade.

CONCERT GIVEN BY BEL CANTO CLUB FRIDAY

ANAHEIM, Dec. 9.—In a gypsy setting members of the Bel Canto club presented its annual concert last night at the Knights of Pythias hall before an enthusiastic audience that was not slow in voicing its approval of the varied program.

Under the direction of Mrs. Leah Pemberton both the chorus work and solos were exceptionally fine this year while dances by students of the Putman studio in Santa Ana and the Spanish orchestra under the direction of Sol Gonzales were other features of the evening.

The performers were dressed in gypsy, German and Spanish costume, the latter being used in the finale, and all combining to form a colorful program.

Among the numbers that were particularly well done was "Song of the Critan" sung by William Fackiner; "Bells at Eventide," by Rachmaninoff, sung by the chorus; "Ich Liebe Dich" by Grieg, sung as a duet by Althea Lembke and Gordon Whalley; "Bird Songs at Eventide" sung by Lulu Shandrow and "Il Bacio" sung by Betty Fackiner.

Ernest Holmes created a humorous note in the program in his rendition of the "Big Bass Viol" while Magdelene Schrott gave a Mae West interpretation of "Pettin' in the Park" and O. K. America." In the latter number the audience joined her in singing the chorus.

The Spanish scene included the chorus singing, "Nightfall in Granada" and the Spanish orchestra playing an Argentine tango, "La Cumparsita" and "Danza Mexicano." Looli Buel danced "Por Fin Toros" and later with Virginia Wilson performed "Jata Jarahi." Betty Fackiner sang "Estrellita" and Lulu Shandrow and Gordon Whalley sang the duet number, "La Borachitta." The concluding chorus number was "Cielito Lindo."

This will be sung by Marian Gragg, Robert Miller and Ray Brown.

Ellen and Katherine Collins will sing, "Sleep Holy Child," followed by the chorus singing "Hail to the Lord's Anointed" and a mezzo soprano solo sung by Mildred Rogers, "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne." The Ladies quartet and chorus will sing, "Hear the Joy Bells Ring" and as a concluding number the chorus will sing, "My Soul Doth Magnify the Lord."

The evening's program will be opened with the high school orchestra playing four numbers, "Around the Christmas Tree" by Tobarie, "Five Favorite Yuletide Songs" by Mendelssohn arranged by Tolani, "Ring Out Sweet Bells" by Gernwald and "Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel, arrangement by Moses.

CHIEF ORDERS ALL LIQUOR DESTROYED

ANAHEIM, Dec. 9.—"The old order changeth" even in a police department and so yesterday Chief of Police James S. Bouldin gave, what will perhaps be his last order of that kind, orders that all liquor confiscated during the past several months be "dumped."

Accordingly yesterday afternoon the police held a dumping party and poured out 10½ gallons of whiskey, six pint bottles of whiskey, three gallons of alcohol, one gallon of wine and four cases of beer.

The completely rebuilt and modernized plant is operated under federal supervision, with two United States government inspectors in attendance. The plant is fully equipped in every way to supply any demand of the wholesale meat trade.

CONCERT GIVEN BY BEL CANTO CLUB FRIDAY

ANAHEIM, Dec. 9.—In a gypsy setting members of the Bel Canto club presented its annual concert last night at the Knights of Pythias hall before an enthusiastic audience that was not slow in voicing its approval of the varied program.

Under the direction of Mrs. Leah Pemberton both the chorus work and solos were exceptionally fine this year while dances by students of the Putman studio in Santa Ana and the Spanish orchestra under the direction of Sol Gonzales were other features of the evening.

The performers were dressed in gypsy, German and Spanish costume, the latter being used in the finale, and all combining to form a colorful program.

Among the numbers that were particularly well done was "Song of the Critan" sung by William Fackiner; "Bells at Eventide," by Rachmaninoff, sung by the chorus; "Ich Liebe Dich" by Grieg, sung as a duet by Althea Lembke and Gordon Whalley; "Bird Songs at Eventide" sung by Lulu Shandrow and "Il Bacio" sung by Betty Fackiner.

Ernest Holmes created a humorous note in the program in his rendition of the "Big Bass Viol" while Magdelene Schrott gave a Mae West interpretation of "Pettin' in the Park" and O. K. America." In the latter number the audience joined her in singing the chorus.

The Spanish scene included the chorus singing, "Nightfall in Granada" and the Spanish orchestra playing an Argentine tango, "La Cumparsita" and "Danza Mexicano." Looli Buel danced "Por Fin Toros" and later with Virginia Wilson performed "Jata Jarahi." Betty Fackiner sang "Estrellita" and Lulu Shandrow and Gordon Whalley sang the duet number, "La Borachitta." The concluding chorus number was "Cielito Lindo."

CHIEF ORDERS ALL LIQUOR DESTROYED

ANAHEIM, Dec. 9.—"The old order changeth" even in a police department and so yesterday Chief of Police James S. Bouldin gave, what will perhaps be his last order of that kind, orders that all liquor confiscated during the past several months be "dumped."

Accordingly yesterday afternoon the police held a dumping party and poured out 10½ gallons of whiskey, six pint bottles of whiskey, three gallons of alcohol, one gallon of wine and four cases of beer.

In the future there will not be arrests for possession of intoxicating liquor unless it is "bootleg."

THE PULPIT AND THE BARBER'S CHAIR

The judge who presided in the trial of the young Negro in the Scottsboro case in Alabama instructed the jurors at the beginning of the case not to go to a barber shop or to church on Sunday. He explained that in a barber shop there is bound to be gossip concerning the case, and in church the minister was quite apt to refer to it. So, to keep their minds open, he advised them to go to neither of these places.

In most places, the jury is segregated in capital cases until the verdict is rendered. This does not seem to be the case in Alabama. But why pick on the minister and the barber? In a case like the Scottsboro case, public feeling runs high. Probably it is the talk of the town. The jurors would run into that feeling on the street corner, and everywhere else they might happen to be. They would have the Sunday newspaper, and read all about the case in that.

The minister may not like to be classed with the barber in such a matter. And, quite as likely, the barber might not want to be put in the same class with the minister. The one would not take offense at the other in holding such an opinion. We cannot quite catch the psychology of the judge in the matter. Something must have been lying in the back of his mind, which suggested the instruction. But it would seem that if the jury were to be at large at all in such a case, the barber and the minister should not have been singled out as the men of influence who might warp the mind of a jury.

In the meantime, the Negro boy has been convicted in a capital case in which there is much contradictory testimony which should be far from dissolving every reasonable doubt. It is by no means an open and shut case like the San Jose kidnaping case. The temper of Judge Callahan, who presided at this third trial, was quite different from that of Judge Horton, who presided at the previous trial, and who set aside the verdict of the jury on the basis of exactly the same evidence as that presented at the latest trial. The case will again go to the Supreme court of the United States.

MORAL BY LAW

The present restrictions, if you can call them such, upon the sale of intoxicating liquor, were made by the liquor "fellows" themselves. Certainly no prohibitionist, as far as we know, had anything to do with the law, or with its administration.

But already they want it liberated. They can drink liquor anywhere. They can buy liquor at any licensed place, but there is just one exception. There was one man who couldn't sell the liquor, that is, he couldn't sell distilled liquor. He could sell beer. And of course if there is any one man anywhere, who can't sell liquor, under these restrictions, that will tempt him to become a bootlegger. This one man is the restaurant man, the hotel man, the man who is serving meals. And so they will have a referendum to take down, as far as we can observe, the only restriction there is.

All this is done, of course, to protect the people from the bootlegger and the speakeasy. It is very logical. Make it legal to sell and drink liquor anywhere practically, and everywhere, and you will have no law violations! Put the law down so low that it is impossible for anybody to do anything with liquor and not violate the law, and presto! You have a law-abiding people. You actually have done what the liquor fellows have long declared you couldn't do. You have made the people law-abiding and "moral" by law.

MARY PICKFORD FILES SUIT

Prolonged separations and rumors have robbed the news of the filing of a divorce by Mary Pickford of any element of surprise. When Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks have from time to time denied that a divorce was imminent the reaction was one of hope but as time passed and their various interests and labors kept them in separate countries the divorce appeared inevitable. When two people can get along apart as well and contentedly as at least one of these stars appeared to be doing, they sooner or later break the ties that bind them together.

An interdependence is one of the safeguards of marriage. Couples who are so wealthy that there is no need for them to do anything for each other—when all the little cares which one person exercises over another are performed by servants it is difficult for love to thrive. It is paradoxical that the individual wants freedom and independence and yet marriage, one of the finest relationships of life, is so jeopardized by independence.

A RENAISSANCE AT WHITTIER

A report from the Whittier school bespeaks a new and happier regime there since the passing of the "dark age" which existed for a few years at the school. During the "dark age" it happened that a boy tried to commit suicide, because he was so wretched in the school. Today boys, released from the school and finding no honest means of earning a livelihood are returning to the school. Their return puts a new problem squarely before the state for the state cannot divest itself of responsibility for these boys who are demonstrating their desire to be good citizens.

This news from the Whittier school is good. For a time thoughts of Whittier were offensive thoughts because it was going down hill fast. It was all the more painful since prior to that time Whittier had established a nation-wide standard for such institutions. It is on the upgrade once more and we can rejoice in the reports.

MOVEMENT FOR SANTA ANA PARK DESERVES SUPPORT

The efforts of those, who are endeavoring to make possible the development of a park here in the city of Santa Ana, through the use of CWA funds, should be highly recommended and strongly supported.

With the thousands of dollars, which the Federal government is pouring into the 3000 counties of America for a civic works program, there should be built up the highest values that can possibly be built up with this money. Public officials are seeking opportunities for its use.

Santa Ana needs additional parks and this is the opportunity par excellence for her to achieve that goal. It is necessary for some men to help out financially in the guarantee required to make the money available. We are glad to note that enterprising citizens of Santa Ana are undertaking this, and we know that it will be accomplished.

With the competition of a recreational character that there is for the young people, the greater the emphasis we can place upon the appeal of the great out of doors, the better it is for all concerned.

We would confidently urge that those who can aid this enterprise to respond quickly. Let us receive permanent values, as far as we can from the money that is now being expended,—permanent values materially, permanent values for recreational purposes, and permanent values in investments that will help our city in all respects.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT"

The advent of the new social register is another of those things which add spice to life. One can hardly conceive that it serves any other useful purpose for the omissions and inclusions are so illy assorted as to rob it of all good influence on social standards.

Senator Long's name has been included in the Washington social register and the names of Senator LaFollette and General Johnson have been omitted.

The people of the Little Neck club after the Long Island episode last summer were profuse in their explanations of how the Senator ever got into their club, even for an evening. They wanted it distinctly understood that ordinarily Senator Long wouldn't have been there. But they were, at that time, having a semi-public benefit entertainment of some sort.

The public is today quite curious regarding the basis on which the selection of names to appear on the Washington Register was made Undoubtedly it is better for the respect accorded social registers, by those who do not respect them, that the basis of selection should not be divulged.

Mr. Swing, Attorney

Riverside Daily Press

Scores of Riverside countians will be interested in the story that comes from San Diego, broadcasting the information that Phil D. Swing had hung out his shingle in the city of the bay'nclimate as a practising attorney.

Riverside county has a kindly feeling for Mr. Swing because of the many outstanding things he has done for the county's benefit. The San Diego Sun welcomes Mr. Swing editorially in this fashion:

In this issue of The Sun you will read that Mr. Phil Swing, San Diegan by adoption, has put out his shingle as a practising attorney.

We are right glad to welcome Mr. Swing again Having greeted him as citizen, we are proud to let down the portcullis to him as attorney.

Mr. Swing knows his law, having proved his proficiency in it in the Imperial Valley and in Washington. Without desiring to seem prejudiced in his favor we cordially bespeak for him at least clients enough to keep him here. In fact we presume to hope that he will do well enough to enable him to have leisure for civic affairs in which he can render invaluable service.

Duces tecum and many of them, Mr. Swing.

Boy First in Football is Very Sensible Rule

San Bernardino Sun

"The boy comes first, the school second, and the public third. I know there's an obligation to each, but to my mind, that's the order of importance."

He also said, of the players, "The boys still have fun playing football and they have fun practicing. They are never driven; they are only encouraged."

The boy first, the public last, looks like the right order of importance. If the public wants the order reversed it should go in for professional football, not college matches.

Intense rivalries between colleges and between teams in different sections of the country are inevitable, but even so the health and education of the college players come first. If they can put on a thrilling game and carry off a victory occasionally and still enjoy the sport and keep up their studies, they are doing well. Alumni greedy for as many victories as games should just go into the silence and leave the team alone.

The Flying Lindberghs

Oakland Tribune

The safe landing of the Lindberghs, after flying 1873 miles across the South Atlantic, brings congratulations and relief. Because they are national figures, so close to the hearts of millions, there is often a silent wish, unreasonable but understandable, that they would not undertake exploits the rest of us still call dangerous.

Yet the Lindberghs must fly and it may be said that in all his preparations and calculations the Colonel is remarkably thorough. He was built for the clouds and his career is to extend aviation in the safe and useful ways. Since July 9 he and his wife have flown 19,000 miles. They have studied the northern and southern routes over the Atlantic, pioneering in those efforts which will one day bring regularly scheduled flights from one continent to the other.

The nation which does not ask its hero to give up his career, has pride in his skill and technical knowledge, the caution he displays and service he performs. With each of his successful flights it usually sighs first with relief and then rejoices.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE CIRCLE

My resolutions all were made
Before the dawn of January,
When snow was drifting down the glade
And out across the shining prairie.
I'd loafed too much along the way
But hard experience had cured me;
Hereafter I should never stray
Where folly lured me.

Throughout a new and happier year
I'd loiter in no pleasant byway,
But fare, without a thought of fear,
Among the heroes of the highway.
I'd do the things I ought to do,
My best endeavors I'd redouble
To carry on and follow through
And laugh at trouble.

Let Spring invite me as she might,
Let Summer sound her pipe and tabor,
I should not glance to left nor right
But spend my days in toilful labor.
With courage in my heart and soul,
From idleness my ways I'd sever
Until at last I gained the goal
Of my endeavor.

But, as in all the bygone days,
My footsteps led me here and yonder,
The leaf-embowered easy ways
Were those through which I liked to wander.
And now, with Winter in the glen,
I'm growing weary and faint-hearted,
And find that I am back again
Just where I started

Thoughts On Modern Life

BY GLENN FRANK

INVESTMENT IN UNCERTAIN DAYS

Despite the darkness and uncertainty of the time there are thousands of Americans who, in varying degrees, have some money to invest and are baffled by the maze of uncertainties they face.

In the good and gay days of prosperity we invested such surplus funds as we were fortunate enough to have in the light of certain rough judgments. We looked into past earning records of the enterprises in which we thought investment might prove profitable and, by and large, gambled that the enterprise that had made good in the past would make good in the future. There were refinements of analysis and judgment, of course, but in the main our faith was based on past performance.

This is not now an adequate base of judgment. The fortunes and status of many enterprises have been drastically altered during the last four years. Many enterprises that were among the safest a few years ago are today doubtful in prospect. The outlook of many enterprises has been complicated by the new regulations of the national recovery legislation.

As never before, sound investment must rest upon sound valuation of the future of enterprises, and the past of these enterprises will throw less light on their future than ever before.

There are a few principles of judgment to which it would seem wise to tie. They are:

The safest investment in these uncertain days would seem to be in the common stocks of those enterprises that are growing rapidly and have every promise of a good stretch of years of sound development ahead of them.

The true worth of common stocks should be estimated in terms of their future value instead of their immediate value.

The soundest ground for investment now is confidence that the enterprise in which we invest has a chance at a progressively expanding consumer market for years to come.

At no time in our national history has it been so necessary for the investor to be a good prophet in order to make good profit.

Our Children By Angelo Patri

ROOM FOR THE CHILD

This is an appeal to the elderly people, settled in their habits, to give the child who has been forced to live with them, a chance for his life. Please, you fathers and mothers and aunts and uncles who have opened your homes to the homeless ones of your family, open your hearts and your minds to them at the same time. A child is an active little creature, not a finished personality like yourselves. Give him a chance.

He wakens early and his first instinct is to crow, to chirp, to shriek, to make a joyful noise as all other little creatures do when the dawn breaks. He needs to do this to open his lungs, to stretch his body, increase his circulation and breathing. It is a part of his health exercise. Let him do his noises and learn to smile at them, even if they take the form of howls. You can suffer them joyfully if you tell yourself, "The little chap is growing." Noise is just the normal accompaniment of growth. Nature is wasteful, to our eyes and ears, but how sane she is.

These little children are untidy. They scatter their blocks about on the floor. You'll find a doll in the dishpan and a shoe in your hat. Well, what of it? Smile and put things where they belong, and make a point of giving the little one a place for his things If you keep putting them there as you find them, and keep showing him where they belong, he is going to learn what you want him to know. Especially will this be so when he has to go to that place for his things when he wants them.

It is inconvenient to have these children trotting in and out when one has certain dedicated hours. They disturb the quiet of the reading hour; they interrupt naps; they break in on visitors and break up intimate conversations; they put an edge on life. True enough, they are disturbers of the peace. But isn't there another side?

A child in the house brings back the spirit of youth. You need that spirit more than you know. It will renew you in body and mind. It will bring back thoughts and feelings that you thought gone forever. Laughter will quicken your blood, fun will lighten your step. The interests of childhood and youth, their play, their desires, their pleasures will put new life into your hardening arteries and rob your old joints of some of the rheumatism that threatens them. Children will push back old age to the vanishing point, if you will only give them a chance.

I am asking that you surrender your home, the customs of a lifetime, for the whims of a child. I am asking for a chance for this child, I am pleading for a place for him in your heart as well as in your home. Don't groan every time he falls, spills a box of clattering toys, and leaves his things all over the place. Smile even if it hurts you, and you'll learn to like it and him.

And remember his suffering mother. She is weeping silently over the loss of her home, her family ties, her child's background. Let love dominate charity and your immediate reward will more than satisfy your soul.

(Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.)

Boy First in Football is Very Sensible Rule

San Bernardino Sun

"The boy comes first, the school second, and the public third. I know there's an obligation to each, but to my mind, that's the order of importance."

He also said, of the players, "The boys still have fun playing football and they have fun practicing. They are never driven; they are only encouraged."

The boy first, the public last, looks like the right order of importance. If the public wants the order reversed it should go in for professional football, not college matches.

Intense rivalries between colleges and between teams in different sections of the country are inevitable, but even so the health and education of the college players come first. If they can put on a thrilling game and carry off a victory occasionally and still enjoy the sport and keep up their studies, they are doing well. Alumni greedy for as many victories as games should just go into the silence and leave the team alone.

The Flying Lindberghs

Oakland Tribune

The safe landing of the Lindberghs, after flying 1873 miles across the South Atlantic, brings congratulations and relief. Because they are national figures, so close to the hearts of millions, there is often a silent wish, unreasonable but understandable, that they would not undertake exploits the rest of us still call dangerous.

Yet the Lindberghs must fly and it may be said that in all his preparations and calculations the Colonel is remarkably thorough. He was built for the clouds and his career is to extend aviation in the safe and useful ways. Since July 9 he and his wife have flown 19,000 miles. They have studied the northern and southern routes over the Atlantic, pioneering in those efforts which will one day bring regularly scheduled flights from one continent to the other.

The nation which does not ask its hero to give up his career, has pride in his skill and technical knowledge, the caution he displays and service he performs. With each of his successful flights it usually sighs first with relief and then rejoices.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

THE CIRCLE

My resolutions all were made
Before the dawn of January,
When snow was drifting down the glade
And out across the shining prairie.
I'd loafed too much along the way
But hard experience had cured me;
Hereafter I should never stray
Where folly lured me.

Throughout a new and happier year
I'd loiter in no pleasant byway,
But fare, without a thought of fear,
Among the heroes of the highway.
I'd do the things I ought to do,
My best endeavors I'd redouble
To carry on and follow through
And laugh at trouble.

Let Spring invite me as she might,
Let Summer sound her pipe and tabor,
I should not glance to left nor right
But spend my days in toilful labor.
With courage in my heart and soul.
From idleness my ways I'd sever
Until at last I gained the goal
Of my endeavor.

But, as in all the bygone days,
My footsteps led me here and yonder,
The leaf-embowered easy ways
Were those through which I liked to wander.
And now, with Winter in the glen,
I'm growing weary and faint-hearted,
And find that I am back again
Just where I started

Little Benny's Note Book by Lee Pape

We was eating breakfist and ma said to pop, My goodness, Wilyum, cheer up, you look as if the proverbial diffrent tawk about the world was on your shoulders.

That's quite a coincidence, because that's just the way I feel, pop said.

Giving me a ideer, and I said, G. pop, I had a swell dreem about you last nite, I dreemed you was such a grate man everybody knew about you on account of having read about you in the papers, or heering other people tawk about you, and I dreemed me and you was taking a wawk and we went passed diffrent tall high bildings with big sines on them saying, The Willyum Potts Automobeel Werks, The Willyum Potts Candy Factory, The Wilyum Potts Holesale Laundry, and diffrent things like that.

Well, fancy that, that was me, eh? pop said, and I said, Yes, sir, and I dreemed we kept on wawking and some man said to you, How do do, Kernel, and another one said, How do do, Admiral, and another one said, How do do, Governor, and diffrent things like that, and you just saluted them without looking conceeted or anything.

I've always thawt I could bare high honors becomingly, and now I'm sure of it, pop said, and I said, Yes, sir, and I dreemed all of a sudden you started to sing and you sounded so swell everybody started to cheer and clap and throw flowers.

That's almost the best news of all, I can now face the oncoming day with new courage and confidence, and with the limited means at my command I cheerfully pass on part of my new found good fortune, pop said

And he gave me a dime and started for his office looking better instead of werse, and ma said, Did you axually have any such a dreem as that?

Mam? I said, and she said, Well my lands of all things, I bleeve you just made that all up out of an empty head.

Wich I did.

Following an hour of spirited discussion, the board of supervisors passed a resolution giving Orange county a free library system under what was known as Section 2 of the State Library Law. In the general voting held, the only dissenting vote was cast by Mrs. D. Eyman Huff, who wished further information regarding circulated statements as to a definite choice of librarian.

Thoughts On Modern Life

BY GLENN FRANK

INVESTMENT IN UNCERTAIN DAYS

Despite the darkness and uncertainty of the time there are thousands of Americans who, in varying degrees, have some money to invest and are baffled by the maze of uncertainties they face.

In the good and gay days of prosperity we invested such surplus funds as we were fortunate enough to have in the light of certain rough judgments. We looked into past earning records of the enterprises in which we thought investment might prove profitable and, by and large, gambled that the enterprise that had made good in the past would make good in the future. There were refinements of analysis and judgment, of course, but in the main our faith was based on past performance.

This is not now an adequate base of judgment. The fortunes and status of many enterprises have been drastically altered during the last four years. Many enterprises that were among the safest a few years ago are today doubtful in prospect. The outlook of many enterprises has been complicated by the new regulations of the national recovery legislation.

As never before, sound investment must rest upon sound valuation of the future of enterprises, and the past of these enterprises will throw less light on their future than ever before.

There are a few principles of judgment to which it would seem wise to tie. They are:

The safest investment in these uncertain days would seem to be in the common stocks of those enterprises that are growing rapidly and have every promise of a good stretch of years of sound development ahead of them.

The true worth of common stocks should be estimated in terms of their future value instead of their immediate value.

The soundest ground for investment now is confidence that the enterprise in which we invest has a chance at a progressively expanding consumer market for years to come.

Our Children By Angelo Patri

ROOM FOR THE CHILD

This is an appeal to the elderly people, settled in their habits, to give the child who has been forced to live with them, a chance for his life. Please, you fathers and mothers and aunts and uncles who have opened your homes to the homeless ones of your family, open your hearts and your minds to them at the same time. A child is an active little creature, not a finished personality like yourselves. Give him a chance.

He wakens early and his first instinct is to crow, to chirp, to shriek, to make a joyful noise as all other little creatures do when the dawn breaks. He needs to do this to open his lungs, to stretch his body, increase his circulation and breathing. It is a part of his health exercise. Let him do his noises and learn to smile at them, even if they take the form of howls. You can suffer them joyfully if you tell yourself, "The little chap is growing." Noise is just the normal accompaniment of growth. Nature is wasteful, to our eyes and ears, but how sane she is.

These little children are untidy. They scatter their blocks about on the floor. You'll find a doll in the dishpan and a shoe in your hat. Well, what of it? Smile and put things where they belong, and make a point of giving the little one a place for his things If you keep putting them there as you find them, and keep showing him where they belong, he is going to learn what you want him to know. Especially will this be so when he has to go to that place for his things when he wants them.

It is inconvenient to have these children trotting in and out when one has certain dedicated hours. They disturb the quiet of the reading hour; they interrupt naps; they break in on visitors and break up intimate conversations; they put an edge on life. True enough, they are, disturbers of the peace. But isn't there another side?

A child in the house brings back the spirit of youth. You need that spirit more than you know. It will renew you in body and mind. It will bring back thoughts and feelings that you thought gone forever. Laughter will quicken your blood, fun will lighten your step. The interests of childhood and youth, their play, their desires, their pleasures will put new life into your hardening arteries and rob your old joints of some of the rheumatism that threatens them. Children will push back old age to the vanishing point, if you will only give them a chance.

I am asking that you surrender your home, the customs of a lifetime, for the whims of a child. I am asking for a chance for this child, I am pleading for a place for him in your heart as well as in your home. Don't groan every time he falls, spills a box of clattering toys, and leaves his things all over the place. Smile even if it hurts you, and you'll learn to like it and him.

And remember his suffering mother. She is weeping silently over the loss of her home, her family ties, her child's background. Let love dominate charity and your immediate reward will more than satisfy your soul.

(Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.)
